Skybolt Test Is Successful For 1st Time

But It Won't Alter JFK Decision To Scrap Missile

COMBINED AP & UPI

CAPE CANAVERAL — The U.S. Air Force today launched its controversial Skybolt missile from a high-flying jet bomber and scored a ringing success that may have paved the way for a congressional fight to save the program from extinction.

The five-ton missile roared 900 miles across the Atlantic Ocean today to its first success.

The success came after five straight failures that had played a major part in a joint Anglo-American decision only yesterday to relegate the complicated missile to the scrap pile. (See related stories, page 2.)

President John F. Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan had agreed to drop the Skybolt system and concentrate instead on the submarine-launched Polaris missile as a replacement.

At Palm Beach, the White House made it clear that the successful test of a Skybolt would not alter the sweeping new concept of a Western nuclear deterrent worked out by Kennedy and Macmillan.

NASSAU PACT

Kennedy, starting the Christmas holidays here with his family, left it up to the Defense Department to issue a detailed reaction to the successful flight of the bomber-to-target missile. But a presidential spokesman underlined the fact that the Nassau agreement still stands.

At Nassau, Kennedy and Macmillan agreed that Skybolt should be abandoned and that instead the United States make available to the British the Polaris missile for their submarines.

The United States also made a similar Polaris offer to French President Charles de Gaulle. The White House said today there had been no response as yet.

The Air Force, in a masterpiece of understatement, said little more than that the Skybolt "completed a successful test flight today."

FIRING LINE

The missile went to the firing line under the wing of a B-52 bomber flown out of Elgin Air Force Base, Fla.

An announcement said the rocket was fired at an altitude of 40,000 feet and landed in the pre-selected target area hundreds of miles down range.

The success was hailed as evidence that the highly complex missile can work despite what some critics have said about its capability.

However, today's missile was far from the finished product and much work would be needed to make it a reliable weapons system.

The Air Force and Douglas Co., Skybolt prime contractor, had hoped to fire the missile during the Bahamas talks. But political decision apparently

Prisoner Exchange Due Monday

HAVANA (UPI) — The Cuban government began transferring captured leaders of the Bay of Pigs invasion from the Isle of Pines to Havana today in preparation for exchanging them for 62 million dollars worth of American-donated supplies.

A total of 214 leaders were being transferred from the maximum security prison on the Isle of Pines. These consisted of company commanders, sons of prominent anti-Castro exiles and the most recalcitrant of the 1,113 prisoners who will be exchanged Monday.

These leaders were transferred to the Isle of Pines seven months ago. There, major political prisoners are kept in the huge octagonal "model prison," from where Cuban officials claim there has never been a successful escape.

Final agreement for the prisoners' exchange was signed last night by Premier Fidel Castro and New York attorney James B. Donovan, counsel for the Cuban families committee for the liberation of prisoners of war.

Early this morning Castro accompanied three officials of the Cuban Red Cross to Havana Airport from where they flew to Miami in Donovan's chartered plane to inspect the medical supplies and other goods being amassed at Opa Locka Airport.

The prisoners from the Isle of Pines were being transferred to Principe Prison—a converted hilltop castle—where they were united with the other

COUNTY WINNER

First and second place winners in the county-wide home Christmas decoration contest sponsored by the Independent-Journal and San Rafael Junior Chamber of Commerce were too "socked in" by fog for photographing last night. But they must be extra special to beat out this third place display of Santa Claus and a whole Christmas village, on the G. W. Robertson home at 342 Sycamore Avenue, Mill Valley. Decoration Winners 'Hard To Find'

Judges of the Independent-Journal-San Rafael Junior Chamber of Commerce Christmas decoration contest had to peer through thick fog last night to judge some of the lighted decorations.

They placed the two top awards in San Rafael, on home decorations so thickly shrouded by fog that an I-J photographer had to take a "fog check" on pictures of them.

First prize and a $50 award went to the hillside home of John Rubke and Dick Bosen at 582 Heather Way, San Rafael. Second prize of $25 went to the Mary Molander home at 2247 Fifth Avenue, a perennial winner.

Third prize, $15, was awarded to another frequent winner: the G. W. Robertson home at 342 Sycamore Avenue, Mill Valley. In fourth place, winning $10, was the home of C. J. Phillips at 220 Knight Drive in San Rafael's Glenwood.

Seventy-one homes were entered in the county-wide contest.

Final judging, after all the homes were rated by a junior chamber of commerce committee, was by Rudy Tulipani, contest chairman; his wife; Mrs. Viola Carlson of the Zonta Club and Mary L. Carlson, her daughter and a San Rafael school nurse.

Fog Finally Lifts At Airport But No Planes Available For Travelers

There was good and bad news today for stranded Christmas air travelers at San Francisco International Airport.

The fog lifted this morning, permitting airplanes to take off with a visibility of two miles.

But there were no airplanes immediately available for use.

All of the available aircraft had departed the terminal by 5:30 a.m. The depletion of San Francisco-based aircraft was caused by some flights being able to leave, but few being able to land.

Airline officials, who have estimated loss from cancellation have cost them two million dollars since the fog settled around the Bay Area Tuesday night, ordered planes in from other areas to take out about 10,000 stranded passengers.

On the first day of winter, the Weather Bureau predicted sunny fair weather through Sunday except for patches of fog late at night and early in the morning.

Hamilton Air Force Base and the Marin County Airport in Novato expected to resume operations at 11 a.m. today after closing at 4:30 p.m. yesterday.

A spokesman at Hamilton said aircraft from other military installations in northern California were continuing to use Hamilton's facilities as conditions at their home bases were worse.

Stranded passengers stood shoulder-to-shoulder in waiting rooms, cocktail lounges and snack bars at San Francisco Airport last night. Some had been waiting four days.

Motels and hotels near the airport were jammed. Southern Pacific and Santa Fe railroads added every available car to their trains. Some flights from and to points on the Pacific Coast were handled last night at the Half Moon Bay Airport, where skies were clear.

On the highways, traffic was slowed to a standstill and record numbers of minor accidents were reported.

Only rain or an exceptionally brisk wind, according to the Weather Bureau, would solve the state's fog problem which persisted into the fifth day and followed almost immediately a five-day rain storm.

Grim Prediction Is Issued: 75 May Die Over Weekend

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Between 65 and 75 motorists could lose their lives on the state's highways over the Christmas weekend, according to the California Traffic Safety Foundation.

The foundation yesterday issued the grim prediction and said that most of the drivers will have been drinking.

The foundation said that recent figures, based on coroners' post-mortem records of all driver fatalities in seven counties during 1961, showed that 68 per cent of the dead drivers had been drinking and 55 per cent were "under the influence" with blood-alcohol levels of 0.10 per cent or higher.

Expert opinions holds that no one can drive an automobile with a blood-alcohol level of 0.10 per cent without serious impairment.

Stuart Wins His Fight To Remain In Election

Felony Charges Might Be Filed Against Kent

The name of John C. Stuart will appear among candidates for Congress on the ballot for the Jan. 22 special election.

Democrat Stuart, fighting to keep his name on the ballot, won by a whisker and in the nick of time yesterday afternoon in Marin Superior Court.

After almost a full day of testimony and tossing out of invalid signatures on Stuart's nominating petitions, visiting Judge Homer W. Patterson of Contra Costa County ruled that Stuart had made it by a single signature.

And William O. Weissich, Stuart's attorney declared in court he would confer with the district attorney on a possible felony charge against Roger Kent of Kentfield, who challenged Stuart's right to run.

GRADER AIDE

Kent, state Democratic vice chairman and campaign chairman for William F. Grader, also a Democratic candidate for Congress, contended that some of the signatures on Stuart's Marin County petitions of candidacy were forgeries—a wife's name signed by her husband, or vice versa; also that Ernest L. Harris of Marin City, who collected the signatures, was not a qualified elector because he had been convicted of a felony, and therefore could not circulate a candidate's petitions.

Weissich's felony declaration was not based on the challenge, but on Stuart's testimony that Kent had offered to reimburse him for expenses in starting his campaign for Congress.

AUBURN HOME

Stuart, whose home is in Auburn—outside the First Congressional District—but who recently established a second residence in Novato, needed 500 valid signatures on his nomination papers. A total of 288 had been verified in Napa County. He needed 212 in Marin.

After almost a full day of testimony and tossing out of invalid signatures, visiting Judge Homer W. Patterson of Contra Costa County ruled that Stuart had made it by one signature.

The decision came at 3 p.m., just in time for County Clerk George H. Gnoss to telephone a printing company in San Francisco to go ahead with printing ballots including Stuart's name.

Although the election is Jan. 22, absentee voting will start

Over 100 In Riot At Cafe

A riot involving more than 100 persons erupted at the Pig Haven cafe north of Sausalito shortly after midnight today after one man accused another of stealing his wallet.

Six sheriff's deputies, including two reserve officers, were needed to break up the fight which started inside the building and spread into the parking lot. Beer bottles, thrown as missiles and wielded as clubs, seemed to be the prime weapon.

Two men were arrested and at least two needed hospital treatment. The pair who apparently set off the fighting—a Caucasian and a Negro—have not been identified.

Deputy Boyd Burnham observed in his report that such fights are getting to be a "regular thing" at the Pig Haven.

Burnham warned there may soon be a homicide at the establishment if it is not permanently closed. The patrons have no respect for the law and refuse to cooperate, he said.

In arresting Cornelius Patterson, 22, of 1617 Webtser Avenue, Marin City, deputies were kicked, poked and cursed by a crowd of about 15 other Negroes who ordered that Patterson be released.

In the patrol car, Patterson kicked out the left rear window. He was in Marin County Jail today in lieu of $1,443.75 bail, booked on suspicion of disturbing the peace, resisting arrest, destroying property, and drunkenness.

Deputies also arrested Thomas G. Wood, 23, of Richmond. He was held in lieu of $656.25 bail, booked on suspicion of

No Letup On Mail For Santa

With Christmas just three days away, there was still no letup today in the volume of mail pouring into the San Rafael Post Office, reported Postmaster Warren H. Williams.

Outgoing mail reached its Christmas peak about the middle of the week, however.

The San Rafael postal crew, now 256 strong, will make one delivery tomorrow, but the post office will not be open. It will be open for a regular 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. day Monday. Williams expects the day to be relatively light.

The office will be closed Christmas, but there will be one delivery of parcels, no letters.

The regular crew of 150 and the extra crew of 106 have been putting in 10 to 12 hours a day. But now the end is in sight.

"We're always glad to see Dec. 24 roll around," Williams said.

All-Girl Crew Shakedown Off

Heavy fog today delayed plans for a shakedown cruise from Sausalito by yachtsman Lee Quinn, 34, and his all-girl crew.

Quinn had planned to sail his ketch, the Neophyte, out the Golden Gate to an area called "The Potato Patch" to test the skill of his female crew. He had hoped following the cruise to depart on his 45-foot ketch for Honolulu to pick up his wife and then proceed to Tahiti.

Quinn said the weather may delay his cruise at least two days.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Actor Allowed To See Son

SANTA MONICA (UPI) — Actor Gary Merrill yesterday won court permission to spend the holidays with his son despite the opposition of his estranged wife Bette Davis.

Merrill

Superior Judge Allen T. Lynch ruled Merrill could have his son, Michael, 10, stay with him at his rented $400-a-month beach home in Malibu from next Wednesday until 4 p.m. New Year's Day.

Appearing briefly in court to contest the custody, the academy award-winning actress contended Merrill's home was located in "not a very savory community."

Miss Davis said she had planned to take Michael and a daughter, Margot, 12, both adopted, to Mexco with her over the holidays. She also has a daughter, Barbara, 16, by a previous husband, Artist William Grant Sherry.

Sherwood To Fight Drunk Charge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Disc jockey Don Sherwood said today he would fight a drunk charge rather than forfeit the $10.50 bail his attorney put up.

Sherwood, 37, was arrested yesterday at 35 minutes after the 2 a.m. closing hour in a bar he once owned.

Sherwood

Policeman Jack P. Medrano said he was attracted by the loud voice of Sherwood, whose real name is Daniel Sherwood Cohelan. There were three men inside the bar.

"I stated they would have to leave as it was past time for the bar to be open to the public," said Medrano's written report.

"The only dissenting voice was that belonging to Cohelan Sherwood. I gave him the choice of leaving or going to jail. He became belligerent."

Sherwood said he had a couple of beers earlier but that the policeman was the one who had a problem.

"I used to own that bar," he said. "I was in there talking to the owners. In comes one of San Francisco's finest, who I feel has a real problem. He told everyone to leave. I thought he was doing a big put-on, a joke."

Sherwood's attorney, Harry Wainwright, said his client wants a hearing. The case is expected to be called Wednesday.

Doctor Acquitted

UKIAH (UPI)—Dr. Wilson Van Dusan, a psychologist at Mendocino State Hospital, was acquitted yesterday of a charge of illegal possession of the drug peyote.

A similar charge against hospital worker Clark Long, 21, was dismissed at the request of Dist. Atty. Frank Peterson.

Dr. Van Dusan was arrested after Long, allegedly under the influence of peyote, was apprehended and said he got the drug from the doctor.

Van Dusan's attorney argued that he acquired the peyote on a prescription and had no knowledge that possession of it was illegal.

Jerusalem Christmas

JERUSALEM (AP)—Christmas season visits to religious shrines in the Jordan section of the Holy Land will be made by 5,600 Israeli Christians, mostly Arabs. About 2,600 of the Christians who will cross the armistice line to visit Bethlehem and other holy places are Protestants and Roman Catholics. The others are Greek Orthodox and Armenians.

Transit Injunction

RICHMOND (AP) — A temporary injunction against the San Francisco Bay Area's rapid transit district will stand until Jan. 10, Judge Martin Rothenberg of the Contra Costa County Superior Court ruled yesterday.

The injunction issued Dec. 10 stopped payment of engineering fees by builders of the proposed three-county, 792-million-dollar project. District attorneys estimated the injunction would cost district taxpayers 1.25 million dollars a month.

The injunction came after filing of a taxpayers' suit which attacked the legality of the bond issue, the district's engineering contracts, its chief engineer and its public relations director.

The injunction was to remain in effect until yesterday when a hearing on a permanent injunction was scheduled.

Russ Row Over Art

MOSCOW (AP) — A headon clash between the Soviet regime and dissenting liberal artists over modern art was revealed today by the Communist party newspaper Pravda.

The artists protested in a letter to Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev that his attacks on Western influences in Soviet art represented a return to Stalinist censorship.

Pravda disclosed this by publishing the speech which the party's chief ideological spokesman, Leonid Ilyichev, a Central Committee secretary, made last Monday at a meeting of about 400 party leaders and artists.

Bodies Recovered

TULLAHOMA, Tenn. (UPI) — Workmen early today recovered two bodies from the bottom of a 250 foot deep rocket test chamber where tons of concrete fell Monday.

The search continued for two other men missing since the well-like chamber crashed to the bottom of the shaft.

Still Critical

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Dr. Barbara Teale, wife of State Sen. Stephen P. Teale (D-West Point) remained unconscious and in critical condition today as the result of a car-truck collision Thursday that took the lives of the couple's two young sons.

A Sacramento county hospital spokesman said Mrs. Teale's condition "hasn't changed at all since she came in."

Killed in the accident were the Teals' sons, Stephen Joseph (Joe), 13, and Peter, 11. Mrs. Teale, 44, suffered severe head and chest injuries when her station wagon was rammed broadside by a hay truck that ran a red light.

Teale's office in Sacramento disclosed that a scholarship fund in memory of the boys has been established at Calaveras High School.

'Criminal Contempt'

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—A federal appeals court has been asked to hold Mississippi's governor and lieutenant governor in criminal contempt for blocking the enrollment of a Negro at the previously all-white University of Mississippi last September.

The Justice Department made the request yesterday, acting on a directive issued by the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which will hear the case.

The New Orleans-based appellate court has already convicted Gov. Ross R. Barnett and Lt. Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr., of civil contempt.

If the two officials are found guilty, it could mean jail terms and large fines. Penalties are almost unlimited in criminal contempt cases.

Judge Appointed

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Edmund G. Brown has appointed Lawrence S. Mana, 45, presently chief deputy city attorney for San Francisco, as judge of the San Francisco Municipal Court.

The governor said Mana's background made him highly qualified for the position.

Mana, a Republican, is a native of San Francisco.

Douglas Regrets Decision

SANTA MONICA (UPI)—Douglas Aircraft Co. yesterday expressed "Deep regret" over the decision by President John F. Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan to scrap the Skybolt missile program.

In a prepared statement, the company said, "we have always believed in the strategic concept underlying this weapon system and continue to be firmly of the opinion that it can be developed successfully and can become of great value to the United States Air Force and the Royal Air Force."

The statement said difficulties encountered in development of the Skybolt system "have been no greater than normal in a test program, or those encountered in many other missile programs which later achieved success."

END OF MEETING — British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and President John F. Kennedy parted with a handshake at end of their three-day meeting in Nassau. The British prime minister was at the airport to bid goodbye to Kennedy. Macmillan leaves for home today after a meeting with Canadian Prime Minister John Diefenbaker. (AP Wirephoto)

Building Polaris Sub Fleet Might Be An Expensive Task

WASHINGTON (AP) — Building a Polaris submarine fleet may turn out to be an expensive task for Britain unless the United States underwrites part of the cost.

A British-U.S. agreement announced in Nassau yesterday spoke of Britain's buying the missiles, providing its own nuclear warheads and building the submarines to launch the missiles.

The United States currently is paying about 116 million dollars for each nuclear-powered Polaris sub—a bill that does not include the craft's 16 missiles which cost about one million dollars each.

Reports from Nassau, where President John F. Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan reached the agreement, did not mention the costly and highly complex fire control and navigation equipment vital to accuracy of the polaris missile when fired from a submerged submarine.

This special equipment accounts for about half the cost of the submarine.

Their gear would have to be supplied by the United States —either by sale or gift—since the British have nothing like it.

If they undertook to produce this equipment, as well as the submarines and the warheads, the British would have to install an expensive industrial capacity for the purpose —after the U.S. Navy furnished the know-how acquired in more than seven years of work on the project.

Should the United States provide the fire control and navigation for free, it could permit the British to build the sub hulls and nuclear reactors for perhaps 58 million dollars, or maybe less because of lower shipbuilding labor costs in Britain. A diesel-powered sub would be about a third less costly.

The British Polaris subs, for example, could cost the United States about 580 million dollars over a period of years to supply the navigational and fire control equipment.

The Kennedy administration might count the investment worthwhile. It expects to save about $2 billion it would have spent otherwise on the Skybolt bomber-launched missile which had been promised to the British at minimum cost.

The United States agreed to supply the Polaris missiles in place of the Skybolt, which is being dropped because of technical difficulties, delays and rising costs.

The British already have one nuclear submarine, the Dreadnaught, which is undergoing sea trials.

It might not be feasible to try to adapt this sub as a missile-firing platform as was done with the first U.S. Polaris submarine, the George Washington. The George Washington was still not completed when it was decided to split her hull in two and lengthen it to accommodate the 16 missile tubes.

A second British nuclear-powered sub has been under construction since early this year and conceivably could be altered to become a missile-firer. The British last week let a contract for a third atomic submarine and since this construction has not yet begun, the plans could be changed.

This country may save the British money in one significant way.

The joint communique issued after the Kennedy-Macmillan talks said the United States would study "the feasibility of making available certain support facilities for such submarines."

This could mean the United States might let the British use the Atlantic missile range off Cape Canaveral, Fla., for test firings. It also might allow the British to train their sub crews on the observation island, an experimental missile test firing ship now based at the Cape.

Macmillan Under Fire For Polaris Agreement

LONDON (AP) — The agreement between Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and President John F. Kennedy to provide British with Polaris missiles in place of Skybolt brought a wave of criticism from right and left today.

It threatened to produce the biggest and most bitter defense row since the war.

The opposition Labor party was reported planning to mount a major attack on the government. It will oppose the deal on the grounds that it is too late, too costly and that the nuclear deterrent had better be left in the hands of one power, the United States.

A furious onslaught was also expected from some right-wing rank-and-file members of Macmillan's ruling Conservative party when he reports back to the House of Commons next month.

As they prepared to disperse for the Christmas recess there were many angry accusations that Macmillan had bartered away Britain's nuclear independence and was coming back empty-handed.

The Laborite Daily Herald splashed its report of the Polaris deal across its front page under the bold heading: "Macmillan's Surrender."

A smaller heading said: "Kennedy wins all the way."

Macmillan will find himself in the position of a man trying to juggle several hot potatoes at the same time.

He will have to justify the switch from Skybolt to Polaris while demonstrating that Britain can afford the huge sums needed to build Polaris-carrying submarines and the Polaris warheads without weakening the country's conventional forces or raising taxation to new high levels.

He will also face the problem of demonstrating that the millions spent already on special planes to carry Skybolt will not be completely wasted now that there will be no Skybolt for them to carry.

WINTER MAKES ITS DEBUT AROUND U.S.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

New Yorkers got their first real taste of snow this season as winter officially made its debut at 3:15 a.m. today with more than two inches on the ground.

Rain had begun to fall by then, erasing somewhat the prospects for a white Christmas but not the memories of one big transportation tie-up.

With the temperature in the 20s last night, the wet snow quickly glazed main thoroughfares and slowed auto traffic to a crawl.

At New York's Idlewild Airport, incoming flights arrived an average of 30 minutes late because of the snow. Departures were up to two hours behind time, primarily because it took that long for buses to make the usual 40-minute trip from midtown to the airport.

Trains coming into Pennsylvania and Grand Central Stations were delayed from five to 75 minutes.

Other cities along the Atlantic seaboard, from Virginia northward, also got their share of snow.

The nation's capital had five inches by nightfall yesterday. School children and government workers were let out early to start their Christmas vacation.

The Weather Bureau posted heavy snow warnings today for Pennsylvania, inland sections of New Jersey, New York and New England.

Strong northerly winds swept cold air from the Northern Rockies and Northern Plains south and Southeastward and sub-zero cold was in prospect tonight for the North Central region. Snow fell in the cold air but amounts were generally light. Snow, rain and sleet hit scattered sections throughout the eastern half of the nation.

A snowstorm, with winds up to nearly 60 MPH, pounded areas in Montana yesterday, cutting visibility to near Zero at Lewiston. The storm tapered off along the northern border. Temperatures throughout the state were above zero.

Coldest weather this morning again appeared to be in northern New England with a low of nine below in Moulton, Maine. At the same time, the mercury was at 70 in Miami, Fla.

Russia has given the new name of Tselinograd, or Virgin Land City, to a community of 100,000 in the northeastern Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic. Its previous name, Akmolinsk, meant White Tomb.

Actor Allowed To See Son

SANTA MONICA (UPI) — Actor Gary Merrill yesterday won court permission to spend the holidays with his son despite the opposition of his estranged wife Bette Davis.

Merrill

Superior Judge Allen T. Lynch ruled Merrill could have his son, Michael, 10, stay with him at his rented $400-a-month beach home in Malibu from next Wednesday until 4 p.m. New Year's Day.

Appearing briefly in court to contest the custody, the academy award-winning actress contended Merrill's home was located in "not a very savory community."

Miss Davis said she had planned to take Michael and a daughter, Margot, 12, both adopted, to Mexco with her over the holidays. She also has a daughter, Barbara, 16, by a previous husband, Artist William Grant Sherry.

Sherwood To Fight Drunk Charge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Disc jockey Don Sherwood said today he would fight a drunk charge rather than forfeit the $10.50 bail his attorney put up.

Sherwood, 37, was arrested yesterday at 35 minutes after the 2 a.m. closing hour in a bar he once owned.

Sherwood

Policeman Jack P. Medrano said he was attracted by the loud voice of Sherwood, whose real name is Daniel Sherwood Cohelan. There were three men inside the bar.

"I stated they would have to leave as it was past time for the bar to be open to the public," said Medrano's written report.

"The only dissenting voice was that belonging to Cohelan Sherwood. I gave him the choice of leaving or going to jail. He became belligerent."

Sherwood said he had a couple of beers earlier but that the policeman was the one who had a problem.

"I used to own that bar," he said. "I was in there talking to the owners. In comes one of San Francisco's finest, who I feel has a real problem. He told everyone to leave. I thought he was doing a big put-on, a joke."

Sherwood's attorney, Harry Wainwright, said his client wants a hearing. The case is expected to be called Wednesday.

Doctor Acquitted

UKIAH (UPI)—Dr. Wilson Van Dusan, a psychologist at Mendocino State Hospital, was acquitted yesterday of a charge of illegal possession of the drug peyote.

A similar charge against hospital worker Clark Long, 21, was dismissed at the request of Dist. Atty. Frank Peterson.

Dr. Van Dusan was arrested after Long, allegedly under the influence of peyote, was apprehended and said he got the drug from the doctor.

Van Dusan's attorney argued that he acquired the peyote on a prescription and had no knowledge that possession of it was illegal.

2nd Catholic High In Marin Considered

Establishment of a second Roman Catholic high school in Marin County is being "very seriously considered" by the Archdiocese of San Francisco, Msgr. Daniel McAlister of St. Raphael's Church announced today.

A new high school and other Marin County developments were discussed at a recent meeting of St. Raphael's where over 100 Catholic laymen heard Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken tell of the building fund drive that will raise money for many projects, including the construction of a new cathedral in San Francisco.

Monsignor McAlister is Marin County moderator for the drive.

Acquisition of a site in Northern Marin is being studied with plans for development sometime during the next five years. Most serious consideration has been given to a site in San Marin, the big subdivision planned on the Freitas C Ranch west of Novato and a site in the neighborhood of St. Vincent's School.

"Both would be near the center of biggest population growth," Monsignor McAlister said. He could not say when the purchase would take place.

Meanwhile plans for the expansion of the present Marin Catholic High School in Greenbrae to increase capacity from 700 to 1,300 students are now being drawn up. This will be a half-million dollar development at least, Monsignor McAlister said.

From eight to 10 new classrooms will be needed, he said.

He did not believe that the new facilities would be ready by the fall of next year. "It will probably be ready by the fall of 1964," he said.

The additional classrooms will be built to the southwest of the present buildings. No additional property is needed and there will be no encroachment on the present playing field.

Monsignor McAlister said the need for school expansion in Marin was recognized long before the destruction of St. Mary's Cathedral by fire.

BUILDING PLANS — Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken makes a wide jesture to describe vast building program called for throughout the San Francisco Archdiocese. It includes eight to 10 more classrooms at Marin Catholic High School and eventual construction of a second Catholic high school in Northern Marin.

Choirs Heard Again

A recording of the Third Annual Lutheran Choir Concert presented at Chapel One, Hamilton Air Force Base, Nov. 18, will be played over stations KTIM and KTIM-FM at 3 p.m. tomorrow.

ANONYMOUS GIFT

Hub Presbyterians To Receive Pipe Organ

An anonymous donor has offered to give the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo a pipe organ, and the offer has been accepted, Dr. Henry Kuizenga, the minister, announced Wednesday night at a congregational meeting.

Dr. Kuizenga disclosed the offer at the church session's meeting Dec. 11, at which time the session voted to accept. Gordon Beesley, chairman of the session worship committee, was named chairman of a committee to negotiate with organ builders for the installation, which is expected to take about two years.

A pipe organ chamber was included in the church's present building when it was constructed five years ago, but the church has been using an electric organ.

The congregation also voted to approve a $104,000 church budget for 1963.

Church Presents Living Nativity

Living nativity scenes will be presented on an outdoor stage adjacent to the Methodist Church of Mill Valley tonight and tomorrow by junior and high school youths of the church. Hours of the 30-minute performances will be 7:30, 8 and 8:30 p.m.

The public is invited to drive into the church yard and watch the pageant enactments, according to Mrs. R. Dean Walton, publicity chairman.

Savings Interest Might Be Raised

Directors of at least two savings and loan associations in Marin County will meet next week to discuss raising interest paid on savings to 4.8 per cent, and the board of a third will consider raising it even higher.

The flurry of talk of increased interest rates was touched off by announcement yesterday that three San Francisco associations will hike interest from 4.75 to 4.8 per cent, effective Jan. 1.

All but two savings and loan associations operating in Marin have been paying 4.75 per cent. But Mrs. R. Keith Dearth of Northwestern Savings and Loan and Jordan L. Martinelli Jr. of Marin County Savings and Loan said their institutions' directors will meet next week to discuss possible increases.

Dr. Earle M. Young, president of Ross Valley Savings and Loan, which has been paying 4.8 per cent since July, said its directors would meet to discuss possibly going still higher.

Marin City Man Robbed By Youths

Three Negro youths pulled a 29-year-old Marin City man from his bicycle and took his wallet with $9 at the Marin City underpass to Bridgeway in Sausalito at 11:30 p.m. yesterday.

Last Tuesday, four Negro youths took a purse from a woman at the same location.

Darrell Flabelle, 99 Cole Drive, Marin City, a molding machine operator, told sheriff's deputies last night that he saw the three youths run ahead of him as he started to work. When he got to the underpass they were waiting for him.

One grabbed him around the neck and another ripped his trouser pocket to get at the wallet. Then they ran.

Flabelle was not injured.

Social Security Bill Is Going Up

Beginning next month, you and your employer will each start contributing another half per cent of your pay to the social security program, reminded Charles H. Shreve, manager of the social security district office in San Francisco.

This will make a total contribution of three and five-eighths per cent on the first $4,800 of annual wages.

When social security began in 1935, it required a one per cent tax on the first $3,000 of annual earnings, Shreve said. Two more half per cent increases are contemplated, one in 1966 and the last in 1968.

Pamphlets explaining the change are available at Shreve's office, 303 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco.

ELECTED—Russell S. Reagan of Sausalito has been elected president of the Insurance Brokers Assn. of California, effective Jan. 1. Reagan, who is with Underwriters' Service insurance brokers in San Francisco, has been on the association's board of governors for three years.

Pope John Delivers Christmas Message

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John XXIII told the world in a Christmas message tonight that there now are "glimmers" of true social and international peace on the horizon.

The Pope spoke in a strong voice in one of the most optimistic holiday messages of his four-year reign, giving little indication of the recent illness which had made a strife-torn world anxious.

The 81-year-old pontiff said that his calls for peace during the recent Cuban crisis that threatened the world with nuclear holocaust apparently were heeded.

"Undoubted signs of high understanding give us assurance that ours were not words spoken into the wind," he said, "but are moving minds and hearts and are opening up new prospects of brotherly confidence and glimmers of serene horizons of true social and international peace."

The pope's Christmas message from his Vatican study was broadcast throughout the world in a multitude of languages by Vatican Radio and was televised through the Italian television network into a nine-nation hookup. It was recorded and filmed in advance.

Intruder Drinks Brandy Sees TV

Someone entered the home of Edna S. Bogardus at 2 Main Street, San Quentin Village, yesterday, drank a quart of milk and nearly killed a fifth of brandy, apparently while watching television.

Sheriff's deputies said the lock on the front door was forced. Three glasses, two of them poorly washed and the other unwashed, were found in the kitchen, apparently used by the intruder or intruders, deputies said. A chair had been pulled in front of the television set.

Blood Donor Day Best For Hamilton

Hamilton Air Force Base's last blood donor day of 1962 was also the best of the year with 425 pints of blood collected, according to Capt. Wallace Hebertson, project officer.

The 4661st Support Squadron was the top at the base, going over its quota of 37 pints by donating 60 pints.

Yule Essay Winners Told In Sausalito

Christine Cruikshank, a seventh grade pupile at Richardson Bay School, today was named over-all prize winner in the Sausalito Chamber of Commerce Christmas essay contest.

Miss Cruikshank is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Cruikshank of 194 San Carlos Avenue. Her essay on "The Christmas I Remember Best" is being produced in poster form and will be on display Monday in the window of the city hall.

Today the 16 prize winning contestants from four Sausalito schools were presented with prizes by Russell H. Papenhausen, chamber of commerce president.

Besides Christine, other winners are: Carolyn Toyes, Hanna Lecskes, De Coty Phillips, Vicki Diane Blankenship, Bruce Morgan, Rene Balliett, Paul E. Kozak, Wyndal Blankenship, Debbie Ripley, Billie Joyce Wright, Phyllis Jones, Elizabeth Mandel, Diana Lopes, Leslie Hail, and David Brackett. Winners are in all grades from second through eighth.

First prize is $5 cash plus a case of soft drinks. Other prizes are in merchandise.

A framed copy of "Lincoln's Failures," describing Abraham Lincoln's failures but over-all success, will be given to each of the schools.

Duffy Is Named Palsy Chairman

Clinton T. Duffy of Greenbrae, former warden of San Quentin Prison, has been named honorary chairman of the 1963 United Cerebral Palsy campaign in Marin County.

On Jan. 15, volunteers will conduct the "53 Minute March," seeking funds to support the United Cerebral Palsy's research and therapy programs. The 53-minute designation refers to the fact that a child suffering from cerebral palsy is born every 53 minutes.

"I am delighted to have this opportunity for association with this worthy endeavor of therapy and research," Duffy said in accepting the appointment.

Concealed Weapon Nets 30 Days In Jail

Maria Cerles, 38, of 11 Grove Avenue, Corte Madera, must spend at least 30 days in Marin County Jail for having a concealed loaded revolver outside IDESSI Hall in Sausalito on Dec. 9.

But the jail term will not begin until after Christmas. Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Municipal Court found her guilty late yesterday, then relented to her pleas that she be allowed freedom for Christmas. He ordered Miss Cerles to return for sentencing at 4 p.m. next Wednesday.

Police arrested her outside the Sausalito hall where a dance was in progress. Witnesses said she had threatened to kill Russell (Bud) Bettencourt of 59 Shell Road, Mill Valley.

She had a .22-caliber white-handled revolver loaded with four bullets at the time of arrest.

Miss Cerles was arrested for drunkenness in July, 1961, car tampering last February, and disturbing the peace last August. Each time she drew probation or suspended jail sentence.

The judge warned her that carrying a loaded weapon is a serious offense, and this time she would have to serve time in jail.

Miss Cerles testified she thought it was all right to carry a gun with her. She said she had no intention of hurting anyone.

New Civic Unit Elects Officers

Dr. William Neal has been elected president of a new Professional and Commonwealth Assn., comprising professional men and merchants of the area east of Highway 101 opposite Terra Linda.

Ron Simpkins of the George S. Nolte Co. was chosen vice president and Dr. Edward Sargent is secretary.

"Orderly development of the area," said Dr. Neal, "is the purpose of the organization. We feel we can aid the Marin County and City of San Rafael Planning Commissions, and coordinate our activity with groups such as the Marinwood and the Terra Linda Community Services Districts."

He said there are now more than 30 merchants, eight physicians and two dentists in the area, with prospects of fast expansion. At a first meeting it was decided to concentrate on improvement of street lighting initially.

Two Tires Stolen

Theft of two white wall tires from a carport of the residence of Ray Hanson of 1135 Grand Avenue, San Rafael, was reported to police Thursday. Hanson said the theft occurred between 6 p.m. Wednesday and 3:15 p.m. Thursday.

Fairfax School Unit Might Buy Property

Supt. Homer L. Sisk of the Fairfax School District was instructed by the district board at a special meeting Thursday night to continue negotiations toward purchase of a property at 62 Park Road adjacent to Central School.

The land is 40 by 100 feet in size and a home on it would be converted to a district office. Its garage would be used for equipment storage. At present the district office is in the Central School faculty room.

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

A Society Editor Announces Her Views Of The Holidays

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

When you read this column I will be on my way to the desert. I'll not be back at my desk until January 7. Right smack dab in the middle of the holidays I'm leaving for a two week's vacation. I'd planned it a long time ago but when I fell victim to a terrible cold my doctor advised I should go to the desert and have a complete rest. So I'm going to do just what the doctor ordered. Therefore today's column has a misleading kicker, as the overline, Marin's Social Whirl, is known in newspaper parlance.

With my good friend Frances Ridge, I'm going to Furnace Creek Inn in Death Valley for Christmas. I love luxurious living, who doesn't? We'll have it there. Of course, I'll see Scotty's Castle, remember Scotty of 20 Mule Team Borax fame? No advertising is intended, that belongs to another department of the Independent-Journal. I'll go to Badwater, and to the lowest spot below sea level in the United States, and to Gold Canyon. And I'll enjoy the desert at its most beautiful time of the year and the glorious colors of the mountains.

No I'm not going to Las Vegas. I just don't like to gamble. It's not my idea of fun.

I don't disapprove of it, please understand. Gambling may do something for some people, not for me. I'd rather pay for what I get.

AS FOR CHRISTMAS, it's a glorious celebration. It makes no difference what our religion is. We all believe in a supreme being. For the Jewish people, this is a time of rejoicing too. Hanukkah, the Festival of Lights, continues for eight days and concludes December 28. The dates for the festival are different each year, varying like Easter does.

So whether you say Joyeux Noel or Embaraka Aiide al Milade, I'll say Merry Christmas to all of you wonderful friends.

HAPPY NEW YEAR to all of you. I've made a New Year's resolution. I promise you I am going to keep it. I'm going to do all I can to save the Marin County courthouse from destruction and business buildings placed on the site of the structure, which has been the hub of life in Marin County since it was built in 1872. It is a substantial building which has withstood several bad earthquakes.

Of course, we would want that recent blister on the Court Street side removed. Wouldn't it be a real tourist attraction, something the Visitors Bureau could show proudly? In the building we could have a Hall of Flowers, filled with blooms and shrubs and wild flowers which flourish in the county during the entire year. In one section there could be an art gallery hung with Marin scenes, showing the county as it was and as it is now. In another part there could be the Marin County Historical Society's museum. The present one is "busting out all over." There is plenty of room for ancient archives and old maps now mouldering away in storage. The grounds could be restored easily, lawns replacing the parking places. Pepper trees, always planted by the early Spanish (there were so many in Marin County), casting their shade over the lawn. And at one side there would be the fountain and pool, similar to the one at which the early day Marinites watered their horses when they came to San Rafael to transact business in the courthouse. I hope many will join me in the "Save the Courthouse League." Goodbye for now and have happy holidays.

AND CHRISTMAS CARDS, I love them. I'm a sentimental fool, as Phyllis Diller would say, when it comes to holiday greetings. It doesn't matter to me whether they're elaborate ones, glittering with words and sealed in gold or silver envelopes, or hand drawn messages held together with three cent stamps. Each sender has taken time and thought to convey greetings of the season to me.

It is the only way we can keep in contact with old friends. Few of us have time to sit down and write them during the year. On many of the cards are brief messages. I received one from a friend, who attended grade school with me in San Rafael, and now lives on a plantation in one of the most remote of the Society Islands.

POPULATION BOOM

State's Growth Spills Over Into Alto, Baja California

Editor's Note: Some of the boom accompanying California's population explosion has spilled over into Baja California. Here's how it has affected both Alto and Baja Californias.)

By NORMAN BELL

SAN DIEGO (AP)—When Fernando Quaha came back to San Diego to find himself in the third largest city of the nation's most populous state he said, "But where is the water?"

Quaha, 68, an Indian who was born on the banks of the San Diego River in Mission Valley, had been away 35 years.

He had retreated with his people from the restless push of a growing state—first into the El Cajon Valley and then across the border into a farming area near Tecate, Mexico.

His valley birthplace, Quaha found, was teeming with city traffic.

Shopping centers, hotels and industrial concerns had crowded out the crops that once grew green and luxuriant along the river.

All that remains of the river itself were some seepage pools in sand and gravel pits.

"The poor land," said Fernando Quaha. "The poor land—it is terrible. Where do they plant the food now?"

In the romantic Old Town—the original San Diego and first capital of Mexico's Alta California — Quaha recognized the adobe Chapel of The Immaculate Conception, and Casa de Estudillo, more popularly known today as the fictional Ramona's Marriage Place.

But to Quaha the few historical shrines of the Spanish-Mexican period seemed lost in the rush and rumble of the city of 616,000—by the State Bureau of Finance 1962 population estimate.

The exhaust fumes, forming blue smog on Old Town's Juan Street, stung his nostrils and brought tears to his eyes.

Fernando Quaha turned his back again on the place of his birth and returned to his Mexican retreat. But he is aware that it, too, was being threatened by Alta California — "El estado mas grande en todos los Estados Unidos."

The border state of Baja California Norte, Mexico's youngest, has long since began to feel the pressure.

More than half a million Mexicans now live in an area where only 20 years ago there were no more than 50,000.

The migration has come largely from the interior of Mexico, lured by the fabulous wealth of the big neighbor.

Most of the newcomers have remained peso-poor, while their cities of Mexicali, Tiajuana and Ensenada have mushroomed under the influence of dollar economy.

Water is a major problem there also. The water lack has become critical in Tijuana, whose 160,000 people barely have enough for drinking and laundry use. Most of them have to buy water from bottle and tank trucks.

State and city governments struggle with finding funds to provide essential public utilities. A project to bring water through a pipeline to Tijuana from wells at La Mision was held up by a suit by taxpayers who didn't want to shoulder the cost.

The La Mision project is only a temporary relief measure, until an aqueduct can be built to bring Colorado River water from the Mexicali valley.

But the Mexicans are complaining that the Colorado water is being polluted by their northern neighbors. They say it is becoming too alkaline even for agricultural use.

Southern Californians know that their largest state must share in solving the border problems for the health and happiness of people on both sides of the line.

San Diego and Tijuana are separated only by the border fence.

Calexico and Mexicali are bosom neighbors and El Centro only a few miles north.

The mighty metropolis of Los Angeles is not too far away—about 140 miles— to feel the border influence, if only because thousands of its citizens travel each weekend to contribute to the sporting and night life of Tijuana.

Mexicans want to improve the quality of the attractions that lure the wealthy Americanos. They are making some progress, and major projects in this respect are reported under consideration.

There is a feeling of neighborly friendliness along the border today. Many of the Mexicans frankly share in California's pride at becoming the biggest state.

Even Fernando Quaha said he hopes that the state of his birth would continue to prosper. But he told Mrs. Florence Shipek, anthropologist, who lives in Pio Pico St., that he did not care to stay.

Store Owner Says $85 In Bills Stolen

Leslie Newberry, owner of the Outdoor Store in Mill Valley, told police Thursday that between 1 and 3:35 p.m. someone took $85 in bills from a cash register at the store at 473 Miller Avenue.

Newberry reported he has an agreement with Geraldine Joines of the nearby 100 Year Box to watch her store when she is away and vice versa. It was while he was away from his store that the money was taken, he said.

Petition Seems Enough For Probe

It appears that a petition of parents will be adequate to force state inspection of structures at Tomales High School.

This was the conclusion today of E. L. Blackmore, coordinator of rural education in the Marin County superintendent of schools office. The petition was filed with the schools office Wednesday by attorney William B. Wolfson, representing the West Marin Citizens Committee for Better Education.

The committee has long faught unification of elementary schools with the Tomales High School District, a move that Tomales trustees favor.

Blackmore said the 25 signatures on the petition will be checked next week with officials at the school to confirm that they are actually the signatures of parents.

If so, the petition will be certified to the State Department of Education, which will order an inspection of the buildings by the State Division of Architecture.

Parents signing the petition claim that the main high school building about 50 years old, has not been inspected since 1933.

Tax Property Up In State

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—Property in California subject to taxation now totals $33,326,967,900, State Controller Alan Cranston reported today, including $294,927,245 in Marin county.

The total is up 5.6 per cent from a year ago.

Cranston said the gross valuation for the state is $34,973,092,791, of which $1,646,124,891 is exempt from property taxes because it is owned by veterans, churches, colleges and welfare organizations.

POPULATION BOOM

State's Growth Spills Over Into Alto, Baja California

Editor's Note: Some of the boom accompanying California's population explosion has spilled over into Baja California. Here's how it has affected both Alto and Baja Californias.)

By NORMAN BELL

SAN DIEGO (AP)—When Fernando Quaha came back to San Diego to find himself in the third largest city of the nation's most populous state he said, "But where is the water?"

Quaha, 68, an Indian who was born on the banks of the San Diego River in Mission Valley, had been away 35 years.

He had retreated with his people from the restless push of a growing state—first into the El Cajon Valley and then across the border into a farming area near Tecate, Mexico.

His valley birthplace, Quaha found, was teeming with city traffic.

Shopping centers, hotels and industrial concerns had crowded out the crops that once grew green and luxuriant along the river.

All that remains of the river itself were some seepage pools in sand and gravel pits.

"The poor land," said Fernando Quaha. "The poor land—it is terrible. Where do they plant the food now?"

In the romantic Old Town—the original San Diego and first capital of Mexico's Alta California — Quaha recognized the adobe Chapel of The Immaculate Conception, and Casa de Estudillo, more popularly known today as the fictional Ramona's Marriage Place.

But to Quaha the few historical shrines of the Spanish-Mexican period seemed lost in the rush and rumble of the city of 616,000—by the State Bureau of Finance 1962 population estimate.

The exhaust fumes, forming blue smog on Old Town's Juan Street, stung his nostrils and brought tears to his eyes.

Fernando Quaha turned his back again on the place of his birth and returned to his Mexican retreat. But he is aware that it, too, was being threatened by Alta California — "El estado mas grande en todos los Estados Unidos."

The border state of Baja California Norte, Mexico's youngest, has long since began to feel the pressure.

More than half a million Mexicans now live in an area where only 20 years ago there were no more than 50,000.

The migration has come largely from the interior of Mexico, lured by the fabulous wealth of the big neighbor.

Most of the newcomers have remained peso-poor, while their cities of Mexicali, Tiajuana and Ensenada have mushroomed under the influence of dollar economy.

Water is a major problem there also. The water lack has become critical in Tijuana, whose 160,000 people barely have enough for drinking and laundry use. Most of them have to buy water from bottle and tank trucks.

State and city governments struggle with finding funds to provide essential public utilities. A project to bring water through a pipeline to Tijuana from wells at La Mision was held up by a suit by taxpayers who didn't want to shoulder the cost.

The La Mision project is only a temporary relief measure, until an aqueduct can be built to bring Colorado River water from the Mexicali valley.

But the Mexicans are complaining that the Colorado water is being polluted by their northern neighbors. They say it is becoming too alkaline even for agricultural use.

Southern Californians know that their largest state must share in solving the border problems for the health and happiness of people on both sides of the line.

San Diego and Tijuana are separated only by the border fence.

Calexico and Mexicali are bosom neighbors and El Centro only a few miles north.

The mighty metropolis of Los Angeles is not too far away—about 140 miles— to feel the border influence, if only because thousands of its citizens travel each weekend to contribute to the sporting and night life of Tijuana.

Mexicans want to improve the quality of the attractions that lure the wealthy Americanos. They are making some progress, and major projects in this respect are reported under consideration.

There is a feeling of neighborly friendliness along the border today. Many of the Mexicans frankly share in California's pride at becoming the biggest state.

Even Fernando Quaha said he hopes that the state of his birth would continue to prosper. But he told Mrs. Florence Shipek, anthropologist, who lives in Pio Pico St., that he did not care to stay.

Two years ago Fanning was elected president of the Reedlands Property Owners Assn. when it was formed.

New vice chairman is John Hoffmire of Little Reed Heights, a developer. Marcel Ehrer of Strawberry is secretary and Rodney Friedman of Belveron Gardens is treasurer.

Directors are David D. Ring of Tiburon, George White of Del Mar, George Banning of Belvedere, Steven Nash of Paradise Drive and Peter Macgowan of Rolling Hills.

Store Owner Says $85 In Bills Stolen

Leslie Newberry, owner of the Outdoor Store in Mill Valley, told police Thursday that between 1 and 3:35 p.m. someone took $85 in bills from a cash register at the store at 473 Miller Avenue.

Newberry reported he has an agreement with Geraldine Joines of the nearby 100 Year Box to watch her store when she is away and vice versa. It was while he was away from his store that the money was taken, he said.

Petition Seems Enough For Probe

It appears that a petition of parents will be adequate to force state inspection of structures at Tomales High School.

This was the conclusion today of E. L. Blackmore, coordinator of rural education in the Marin County superintendent of schools office. The petition was filed with the schools office Wednesday by attorney William B. Wolfson, representing the West Marin Citizens Committee for Better Education.

The committee has long faught unification of elementary schools with the Tomales High School District, a move that Tomales trustees favor.

Blackmore said the 25 signatures on the petition will be checked next week with officials at the school to confirm that they are actually the signatures of parents.

If so, the petition will be certified to the State Department of Education, which will order an inspection of the buildings by the State Division of Architecture.

Parents signing the petition claim that the main high school building about 50 years old, has not been inspected since 1933.

Tax Property Up In State

SACRAMENTO (CNS)—Property in California subject to taxation now totals $33,326,967,900, State Controller Alan Cranston reported today, including $294,927,245 in Marin county.

The total is up 5.6 per cent from a year ago.

Cranston said the gross valuation for the state is $34,973,092,791, of which $1,646,124,891 is exempt from property taxes because it is owned by veterans, churches, colleges and welfare organizations.

Scholarship Won

Gary Rogers, a 1959 graduate of Sir Francis Drake High School, has won the $100 scholarship granted each year by the University of California's Inter-Fraternity Mothers Club. He is manager of the Psi Upsilon fraternity, Berkeley.

West opened the queen of clubs, and East discarded a spade. South saw that he had eight tricks in top cards and that he could not develop his ninth trick in clubs.

DIAMOND QUEEN BEST

South's best chance was to win a trick with the queen of diamonds. He won the first trick with the ace of clubs, led a diamond to dummy's ace and returned a diamond to play the queen from his hand.

This play would win a trick if East had the king of diamonds, but West showed up with the king. South therefore won only eight tricks. Down one.

DEEP FINESSE

South has a better chance if he takes a deep finesse in diamonds. He leads a diamond from his hand and finesses with dummy's 10.

This develops a trick immediately if West has the jack of diamonds. The chance that West has the jack of diamonds is just as good as the chance that East has the king of diamonds.

If dummy's 10 loses to the jack, declarer is still alive. He can cash dummy's ace of diamonds and later lead a low diamond from his hand.

This will produce a trick if the king appears by the time the third round of diamonds has been played.

WIN IN DUMMY

For example, in today's hand the finesse of dummy's 10 would lose to the jack. The heart return is won in dummy, and declarer cashes the ace of diamonds.

He gets to his hand with a spade and leads a low diamond, whereupon West must play the king. Now South's queen of diamonds is good for a trick.

Finessing with dummy's 10 is neither better nor worse than playing East for the king of diamonds.

The advantage lies in the extra chance that the king will drop early even if the first finesse loses.

Machen's World Of Shadows ... Fear ... Blank Mind

By HAL WOOD

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Handsome Eddie Machen, 30-year-old athlete, sits staring at the walls in California's Napa State Hospital today—his mind a blank.

He's not sure where he is. Sometimes he fears the attendants or the doctors or someone else is going to kill him. That's when he screams and goes berserk.

It's obvious that his fight career, a good one that took him near the top of his profession, is all over. He'll be dropped from his ranking as the No. 1 challenger for the world heavyweight boxing title.

There's no chance he'll ever be allowed in the ring again—no more than there's a chance that Alejandro Lavorante, who has been in a coma in a Los Angeles hospital for many weeks after a beating in the ring, ever will be allowed to don gloves again.

The case of Machen is not for, or against, boxing. It's the case of a lad who got off on the wrong foot in life and never learned to handle the complexities of living. When he did make good money, nobody explained to him how it should be handled.

Today he is broke, has no future in his chosen work, and has very little education. He has a wife and three children to support.

So who's to blame?

No one in particular. But many in general. Let's go back to Eddie's earlier years.

Machen was brought up in the bustling little city of Redding in Northern California. From the years he was old enough to roam the streets he was in trouble with the law. He received most of his education in correctional institutions.

He learned a little about the art of boxing there, and then came to the "big city" to make a career of it. Manager Sid Flaherty saw him working out in a gymnasium and took Eddie under his wing in 1955.

Machen won his first 24 fights in a row—the first 10 of these by knockouts. Sixteen of the 24 wins were via the kayo route. Eddie was on his way. The hangers-on jumped on the band-wagon.

Machen wasn't making big money. Most of his fights were part of a build-up campaign, as manager Flaherty brought the lad along carefully. But Eddie wasn't used to handling even the kind of money he was making. He was broke or nearly so most of the time. In his 25th fight he was held to a draw by Zora Folley; and in his 26th, when he was a top challenger for the heavyweight crown, he was knocked out in the first round by a Swede named Ingemar Johansson.

What money Eddie had earned in that bout was spent this time trying to get Johansson to live up to the contract for a return fight. But it didn't work and Machen was broke again.

He climbed wearily back into the ring and won seven more in a row in 1959 before losing a decision to Folley at the start of 1960.

He met Sonny Liston in the fall of that year in Seattle and lost a decision in 12 rounds. The fans booed because he back-pedalled all through the bout.

"But what they didn't know," says his wife, Charlotte, "is that Eddie fought the whole battle with an injured arm."

He fought, and lost, to light-heavyweight champion Harold Johnson—his only loss in 1961. He plugged away with wins over Mike DeJohn and Doug Jones among others in 1961. But these were small-time bouts, in which the biggest fee usually was the $4,000 from television.

However, his defensive style was unpopular and the TV people didn't want him for bouts in 1962. He had an arm injury and couldn't get a fight, although Flaherty says now that he did have a good chance for a return go with Liston, now the champion.

Meanwhile, the expenses kept going and the income was nil. The gas company threatened to turn off the gas in his Portland home. The hangers-on who were friends when he was winning and in the chips, now disappeared when he came around. They weren't about to pay back money he had loaned them.

With his fighting future bleak, with not enough money to pay the bills for his growing family, Eddie finally cracked. He borrowed a car in which there was a pistol. He wrote a suicide note and was contemplating ending it all when he was saved by police.

Even if he makes it back from the world of shadows, he'll have tough sledding.

West Squad Hampered By The Fog

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — If the East-West game were to be played today, the East would win it going away.

The heavy fog is playing havoc with the West team, which still is awaiting nine of its members not to mention head coach Dan Devine of Missouri.

Three of the players and Devine have not been able to make it to the West's training camp at Stanford because they are leading Missouri against Georgia Tech today in the Blue Bonnet Bowl at Houston.

The other six are sitting at airports in Seattle, Salt Lake and Los Angeles and are expected to come trickling in at odd hours for those few moments the fog lifts.

Meanwhile, all of 24 East gridders are working out under head coach Jack Mollenkopf of Purdue at the team's San Jose training grounds.

EAST LINE

Mollenkopf, who has not named a starting lineup, was asked to assemble a line for cameramen and came up with Kentucky's Tom Hutchinson and Boston College's Art Graham at ends; Clemson's Don Chuy and Ohio State's Bob Vogel at tackles, Iowa's Earl McQuiston and Michigan State's Ed Budde at guards and Jay Robertson of Northwestern at center.

One man who was at the West camp was the mammoth Sonny Gibbs of TCU.

Every western player received a suede jacket Thursday except Gibbs. Seems nobody realized just how big the 6-foot-7 quarterback was and there was not a jacket his size.

Gibbs was at the controls as assistant coach Jim Sutherland ran those West squad members who were present through drills yesterday.

Big Six Race Shapes Up As Torrid Four-Team Struggle

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The forthcoming Big Six basketball race was shaping up as a thing of beauty today as Stanford, California, Southern California, and UCLA all were bidding for national recognition on the basis of their pre-conference play.

These teams have so far dropped a total of three games.

Stanford's showing has surprised nobody. Everybody knew the Cards were stacked as long as big Tom Dose was around. Dose has stayed healthy and the Indians have won six straight. They demolished Wyoming, 81-62, last night as Dose hit 21 and blocked shots all over the court. Doug Clemetson added 20 to the Indian attack.

UCLA, which won the NCAA Western Regionals last year, figured to be the only Big Six club around capable of giving the Indians an argument. But then they dropped two early contests. But the Bruins have not lost any others and won at Northwestern Thursday. They get an acid test tonight at tough Wisconsin.

REBUILDING YEAR

For USC and California, it was rumored to be a rebuilding year. So how come Troy is unbeaten and California has only lost to Oregon State (whom they also beat)?

Southern Cal thumped Nebraska, 58-49, at Lincoln last night after trailing at halftime, 30-25. Gordy Martin hit 16 and Al Young 14 for the Trojans, who shot at a .533 percentage. It is Young, a sparkling soph, who has provided that extra something for Troy this year. Troy faces Nebraska again tonight.

California's performance has been even more remarkable since its big center, Camden Wall, has been out with a twisted ankle. The Bears bounced Texas, 70-62, last night as deadeye Dick Smith hit 16 points.

Stanford and California shift foes tonight.

Washington and Washington State, which round out the league, do not appear to have nearly as much as their California competitors. But the Huskies dumped Montana last night, 57-53, behind Ed Correll's 15 points.

Outside the state of California, Arizona State, Seattle, and Idaho have shown brilliance, while Oregon State has been the coast's major flop to date.

The Beavers dropped their third game of the year last night at the Kentucky Invitational when 10th ranked West Virginia squeezed out a 70-65 decision.

Terry Baker played his first game this year for the Beavers and hit 15, but the Mountaineers held big Mel Counts to 13. West Virginia's All-American candidate, Rod Thorn, had 18.

The Beavers meet Iowa in consolation action tonight.

Coach Kerr Never Has Forgotten His First Year In Shrine Game

HANLEY

Andy Kerr watched members of the East-West football teams at the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children in San Francisco and the spry little Scotsman's eyes twinkled. It was the first visit to this hospital for players on the 38th East-West squads. For Kerr, it was his 36th visit. He made his first one in 1927 when he coached his first East team.

"I have never forgotten my first Christmas visit to the hospital for which the game is played," said Kerr. "My life has been richer and fuller ever since. So, too, will be the lives of these young men for their experiences here today."

Kerr then told a story he has told many times before about a girl named Ethel he met in the hospital in 1927.

"WHEN FRIENDS back East learned that I was invited to coach the 1927 East team they requested me to visit their niece," he said. "I found her in a sunlit ward. Ethel had spinal trouble. She was a little older than the rest of the boys and girls in the hospital and she knew how serious her condition was.

"Well, to make a long story short, Ethel got well and now is married with a family of her own. But she also has dedicated her life in helping others. She became a laboratory technician, reached the top in her profession so she could help others. Ethel and I have been corresponding ever since that Christmas of 1927. It has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my life."

KERR NOW is happy that his 36 year association with the East-West game was not broken in 1932. That was the year his Colgate Red Raiders rolled up 264 points in an unbeaten, untied and unscored on season. But the 1932 Colgate powerhouse received no bowl bid so Kerr remained coach of the East.

"Yes, I'm glad there has been no interruption of my association with this great game that truly is Football's Finest Hour," said Kerr. "What more laudable objective could a game have than the welfare and rehabilitation of crippled children?"

BOXING SENSATION

'Hurricane' Predicts Record Kayo On TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Cassius Clay, who calls himself the "loud-mouth of the heavyweight division," is just a piker compared to Rubin "Hurricane" Carter, the latest sensation of the busy middleweight class.

Cocky Cassius predicts the round in which his opponents "must fall." Carter is using seconds to measure the time he gives his foes.

Tonight, at Madison Square Garden and on national television (ABC 7 p.m., PST), Carter, a 3-1 favorite, aims to annihilate steel-chinned Gomeo Grennan of Bimini in 46 seconds.

Why 46:

The knockout record for national television is 47 seconds and the Paterson, N.J., clouter aims to break it. The quickie mark was established by heavyweight Mike DeJohn when he belted out Charley Powell at Syracuse, N.Y., Nov. 6, 1959.

Carter thought he broke the record when he flattened middleweight contender Florentino Fernandez of Cuba in 69 seconds at the Garden on Oct. 27. He thought the record was 1 minute, 47 seconds.

Four Marin Men Get Prize Bass

Four Marin anglers qualified as winners in the Schenley Striped Bass program sponsored by Schenley Sportsmen's Club. One of the Marin men was a double winner.

Walter Matthews Jr. qualified with a 20-pound, 6-ounce striper and an 18-pounder, both taken from Tomales Bay. Matthews lives in Novato.

The other winners were Joe Caselli of Fairfax with a 21-pounder, 4-ounce bass caught near California City; Tom Grinner of Marin City, 21-pound, 6-ounce striper from Richardson Bay; and David Alexander of Sausalito, 22-pound, 8-ounce bass fished from Richardson Bay.

Jack Nicklaus Named Golfer Of The Year

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus, 22-year-old golfer who in his first year as a pro won the United States Open and a television match with Arnold Palmer and Gary Player, was named yesterday the national sports award golfer of the year.

Nicklaus of Columbus, Ohio, will receive his award here next Friday at the sports award dinner sponsored by the Los Angeles Times.

State Deer Kill Is Low

SACRAMENTO (AP)—California's buck kill for 1962 was tabulated today at a relatively low 54,909.

The final count, taken by the Department of Fish and Game last Monday, fell below the 69,118 in 1961.

It was below the average for the past five years except for the northern coastal counties and Butte, Placer, Calaveras, Merced, Kings and Imperial counties.

The department attributed the decline to 1959-61 drought conditions. Poor range and water conditions resulted for all deer. Fewer fawns survived, further reducing the number of bucks.

The department said early indications from a deer herd spot check are that the number of fawns will be markedly above that of the past three years. This, in turn, would mean more yearling bucks in 1963.

Lombardi, Sherman Pro Bowl Coaches

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Coaches Vince Lombardi of Green Bay and Al Sherman of New York, who will match strategies in the National Football League title game in New York Dec. 30, will give a repeat performance in the Pro Bowl game here Jan. 13.

Sponsors announced yesterday the selection of the pair for the 17th annual tussle in Memorial Coliseum between stars of the Eastern and Western divisions.

It will be the second time for Sherman and Lombardi as Pro Bowl coaches. Last year Lombardi's West won, 35-31.

IT'S BETTER TO GIVE THAN TO RECEIVE . . .

PARKER, Pa. (AP) — The gift-giving spirit, traditional in this Christmas season, made an unexpected appearance on the basketball court at Allegheny-Clarion Valley High School last night.

In the third period of a game against visiting Victory Joint High School, A-C's Jack Master grabbed a jump ball, dribbled down the court and made a perfect lay-up—right into the other team's basket.

A few minutes later, Victory Joint's Pete Bixler, still chuckling over his opponent's mistake, broke through a full-court press to score—and handed the two points back to A-C.

Allegheny-Clarion won 68-55.

It was the first visit to this hospital for players on the 38th East-West squads. For Kerr, it was his 36th visit. He made his first one in 1927 when he coached his first East team.

"I have never forgotten my first Christmas visit to the hospital for which the game is played," said Kerr. "My life has been richer and fuller ever since. So, too, will be the lives of these young men for their experiences here today."

Kerr then told a story he has told many times before about a girl named Ethel he met in the hospital in 1927.

"WHEN FRIENDS back East learned that I was invited to coach the 1927 East team they requested me to visit their niece," he said. "I found her in a sunlit ward. Ethel had spinal trouble. She was a little older than the rest of the boys and girls in the hospital and she knew how serious her condition was.

"Well, to make a long story short, Ethel got well and now is married with a family of her own. But she also has dedicated her life in helping others. She became a laboratory technician, reached the top in her profession so she could help others. Ethel and I have been corresponding ever since that Christmas of 1927. It has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my life."

KERR NOW is happy that his 36 year association with the East-West game was not broken in 1932. That was the year his Colgate Red Raiders rolled up 264 points in an unbeaten, untied and unscored on season. But the 1932 Colgate powerhouse received no bowl bid so Kerr remained coach of the East.

"Yes, I'm glad there has been no interruption of my association with this great game that truly is Football's Finest Hour," said Kerr. "What more laudable objective could a game have than the welfare and rehabilitation of crippled children?"

BOXING SENSATION

'Hurricane' Predicts Record Kayo On TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Cassius Clay, who calls himself the "loud-mouth of the heavyweight division," is just a piker compared to Rubin "Hurricane" Carter, the latest sensation of the busy middleweight class.

Cocky Cassius predicts the round in which his opponents "must fall." Carter is using seconds to measure the time he gives his foes.

Tonight, at Madison Square Garden and on national television (ABC 7 p.m., PST), Carter, a 3-1 favorite, aims to annihilate steel-chinned Gomeo Grennan of Bimini in 46 seconds.

Why 46:

The knockout record for national television is 47 seconds and the Paterson, N.J., clouter aims to break it. The quickie mark was established by heavyweight Mike DeJohn when he belted out Charley Powell at Syracuse, N.Y., Nov. 6, 1959.

Carter thought he broke the record when he flattened middleweight contender Florentino Fernandez of Cuba in 69 seconds at the Garden on Oct. 27. He thought the record was 1 minute, 47 seconds.

Four Marin Men Get Prize Bass

Four Marin anglers qualified as winners in the Schenley Striped Bass program sponsored by Schenley Sportsmen's Club. One of the Marin men was a double winner.

Walter Matthews Jr. qualified with a 20-pound, 6-ounce striper and an 18-pounder, both taken from Tomales Bay. Matthews lives in Novato.

The other winners were Joe Caselli of Fairfax with a 21-pounder, 4-ounce bass caught near California City; Tom Grinner of Marin City, 21-pound, 6-ounce striper from Richardson Bay; and David Alexander of Sausalito, 22-pound, 8-ounce bass fished from Richardson Bay.

Jack Nicklaus Named Golfer Of The Year

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus, 22-year-old golfer who in his first year as a pro won the United States Open and a television match with Arnold Palmer and Gary Player, was named yesterday the national sports award golfer of the year.

Nicklaus of Columbus, Ohio, will receive his award here next Friday at the sports award dinner sponsored by the Los Angeles Times.

State Deer Kill Is Low

SACRAMENTO (AP)—California's buck kill for 1962 was tabulated today at a relatively low 54,909.

The final count, taken by the Department of Fish and Game last Monday, fell below the 69,118 in 1961.

It was below the average for the past five years except for the northern coastal counties and Butte, Placer, Calaveras, Merced, Kings and Imperial counties.

The department attributed the decline to 1959-61 drought conditions. Poor range and water conditions resulted for all deer. Fewer fawns survived, further reducing the number of bucks.

The department said early indications from a deer herd spot check are that the number of fawns will be markedly above that of the past three years. This, in turn, would mean more yearling bucks in 1963.

Lombardi, Sherman Pro Bowl Coaches

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Coaches Vince Lombardi of Green Bay and Al Sherman of New York, who will match strategies in the National Football League title game in New York Dec. 30, will give a repeat performance in the Pro Bowl game here Jan. 13.

Sponsors announced yesterday the selection of the pair for the 17th annual tussle in Memorial Coliseum between stars of the Eastern and Western divisions.

It will be the second time for Sherman and Lombardi as Pro Bowl coaches. Last year Lombardi's West won, 35-31.

IT'S BETTER TO GIVE THAN TO RECEIVE . . .

PARKER, Pa. (AP) — The gift-giving spirit, traditional in this Christmas season, made an unexpected appearance on the basketball court at Allegheny-Clarion Valley High School last night.

In the third period of a game against visiting Victory Joint High School, A-C's Jack Master grabbed a jump ball, dribbled down the court and made a perfect lay-up—right into the other team's basket.

A few minutes later, Victory Joint's Pete Bixler, still chuckling over his opponent's mistake, broke through a full-court press to score—and handed the two points back to A-C.

Allegheny-Clarion won 68-55.

Students Need More Than Quicky Communism Course

Our Midwest contemporary, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, commented editorially on a matter which has been widely discussed in Marin County, the problem of teaching about Communism and capitalism in the schools. Here is what they had to say:

The hardest thing about teaching young Americans what Communism and capitalism stand for may turn out to be the long-prevailing attitude that it isn't necessary for them to learn it — that they get it by a kind of osmosis that comes of being Americans.

That, at any rate, is a possible conclusion from the results of the first year of a six-week course in the subject required by state law for high school seniors in Florida. Only half the Jacksonville students who took the final test scored a passing grade of more than 70 per cent.

Furthermore, a third of them failed to pick out as false the statement "It is possible to be at the same time a loyal citizen of this country and a true Communist," which was what the State Legislature had been most particular they should learn. The course, says the law, shall lay special emphasis on the false doctrines, evils and dangers of Communism, and ways to fight it.

Some of the seniors had only the most confused notion of what Communists and capitalists are, even after taking the course. One said capitalists are "anti-Communists," another that they are "the haves, and the proletariat the have-nots." As for the other system, a graduate of the course described it by saying that "whenever you have a thesis and antithesis you always have a synthesis which is Communism."

All of which suggests that teaching the nature of Communism is not going to be very successful when it is based on crash courses hastily flung together in response to a demand for propaganda rather than education.

To which we add our endorsement and suggestion that California educators might well review their teaching not only of the nature of Communism but, more importantly, the nature of capitalism. After such a review, they may well develop the proper time and method for making sure every student knows the difference.

MARIN LOOKS AT POLITICS

Stuart Wants To Make Clear He Thinks Miller Was Revered

By CHAPIN A. DAY

John C. Stuart, who yesterday won his fight to remain on the Jan. 22 congressional ballot, was upset about the way a statement he made some time earlier sounded when it appeared in this space. "You asked me," he said, "how I found people's feelings about Clem Miller's death. My answer was that the people realized that he was dead but that they seemed in a state of shock."

'CHIP' DAY

"When this appeared in print," Stuart went on, "it seemed to sound like a crude way of expressing myself and saying that everyone I talked with seemed to be of the opinion that they had lost a friend and a dear one.

"As I talked to the people they would relate various things which Mr. Miller had accomplished or said from which they received no small amount of satisfaction and a feeling of friendship.

"It made me feel quite humble and like one standing on hallowed ground with the mist of purification falling upon me and perhaps one not being worthy of being there.

"I only had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Miller once and yet I called him friend," Stuart went on. "By what standards do we call one friend? Certainly not by the standards of service rendered, nor by the phrases of flattery. It is beyond these, yet containing them all and superior to them all.

"Such a man was Clem Miller. Unfortunately there are too few men of this calibre to be met in life's pilgrimage," Stuart concluded.

HE ALSO WAS concerned about someone else in connection with the suit to keep him off the ballot. It wasn't for himself; he seemed to enjoy the legal maneuvers, particularly when he won. It concerned Marin City resident Ernest L. Harris, his verification deputy, around whom the charges raged. Harris was accused of being a convicted felon and thus ineligible to secure signatures.

"It was a dirty trick," Stuart declared, "bringing up an old case, branding a man all over the countryside as an ex-convict just for doing a patriotic service for me. He thought he was doing right and he was qualified by the county clerk as a deputy. It was a dirty trick."

IN THIS UNUSUAL situation of an election campaign coming over the holidays, may I take time out to wish all of you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year in which more people pay more attention to their governments and the men who run them.

ONE WAY TO LOSE 75 POUNDS

A drastic approach to losing weight finally paid off for one desperate woman.

Although she was only 5'6", she weighed 300 pounds for the past 15 years. No diet that she tried would diminish her appetite.

Then she entered a Philadelphia hospital to try a carefully controlled 10-day fast. She was given only water, weak tea, coffee and vitamins.

Not only did her hunger disappear, but her weight also dropped by 23 pounds. In less than a year she had safely lost 75 by periodic fasts of her own.

"The most reassuring feature," said the doctors, "is that she has within her own power, the means of controlling what had appeared to be a hopeless situation."

Losing weight is not everybody's problem, but many thorny obstacles would give way, with the Lord's help, before determination and an intelligent approach.

Instead of writing off any difficulty, large or small, as hopeless, tackle it with a desire to win.

"Do not fear or lose heart."

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

In the many years we have lived in Ross we have not had to call upon our fire department—until taday. We had an emergency. Fortunately, it was not serious, but it might have been.

We should like to go on record and compliment every single one of the men who came to help: the Fire Department officers themselves (and for the speed with which they arrived), and next the volunteers and the police. They all knew their jobs.

There were no unnecessary questions—in fact we had no time to thank them afterwards. The group as a unit was the most efficient we could imagine.

May we take this opportunity to thank them publicly for what they did not only for us but for our children, who might not otherwise have had a house in which to celebrate Christmas.

Children Don't Know Christmas

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

May I suggest that a newsman be sent out to interview children in the Bah Humbug area. Without fanfare or pre-arrangement ask these children for viewpoints on Christmas and what it means to them.

Without lead clauses, without suggestions, without putting words into their mouths, let them voice these stories. When finished, go back to your desk. Note the repetitious use of Santa Claus, presents, Christmas tree, etc., etc. These startling results should be published, truthfully, for all to read just as the Bah Humbug story was printed to sympathize with these "deluded" mothers who complained their children were asking for explanations. What should be so difficult about that?

The best way to explain would be to teach or explain the complete story of Christmas, the true unembellished version. Then escort these children through the shopping districts of any cosmopolitan city immediately, and through it all discourage any conversations about "who-is-going-to-get-what," etc., instead, answering all conversations about the "gimmies" with something pertaining to Bethlehem, Mary, Joseph, etc. If this excursion doesn't leave them with a true understanding of Bah Humbug, nothing else will. Their confusions will certainly be alerted.

Then I'd suggest interviewing these mothers and inquiring why their offspring know so much about baubles and so little about Bethlehem.

I asked 14 children in my area and one, a 10-year-old came up with a worthy story of Christmas.

TRY AND STOP ME

BENNETT CERF

A rich but well-seasoned old maid in Akron finally landed an eligible suitor. She was dreadfully near-sighted, but, knowing how much stock he put in perfect physical health, was resolved to conceal this defect from him by hook or crook. One day she surreptitiously fastened a diamond pin into a tree, and later, seated with her swain on a bench two hundred yards away, exclaimed, "Look, darling. Is that not a diamond sparkling in yonder oak tree?"

"I'm sure I couldn't see a diamond as far away as that," he marveled. "I'll get it for you," she volunteered happily, and arose to retrieve it.

Suddenly her house of cards collapsed. She tripped over a cow.

"Have you ever driven a car?" a state examiner asked a lady who was applying for her first license. "Over 50,000 miles," piped up the lady's husband bitterly, "and never had a hand on a wheel."

Both Holiday Spirit And Spirits Tend To Fend Off 'Bah Humbug'

With all the last minute rush fighting traffic, rummaging for gifts, addressing cards, buying stamps and wrapping gifts, you sometimes want to throw up your hands and embrace the "Bah Humbug" idea.

But as in all past Christmases, the holiday spirit and spirits radiate around you and engulf you, adding a touch of good humor and glamor to every commonplace occurrence.

A BIG WHEEL in one of the Alcoholic Anonymous groups, whose job it is to help straying comrades back onto the straight and narrow, admits he too took the wrong turn. He pleaded guilty before Judge Joseph Wilson and took his medicine with a smile.

KEEPERS OF the jail are quietly correcting the books on an entry made back in August. At that time, a Sausalito woman spent three days in the women's cell for vagrancy.

This week, she was caught again in Contra Costa; she turned out to be a man.

MILT WALLACE of Ignacio is convinced more than ever that it is better to give than to receive.

A couple weeks ago, he donated a turkey to a needy family. He then bought one ticket for last Saturday's turkey shoot at the county pistol range. It won him a turkey.

Faith Nelson of the sheriff's identification bureau was introduced to the new switch board girl, Helen Parent, the other day. For a couple weeks, neither realized they had been in the same WAC outfit at Ft. Des Moines, Ia., back in May of 1945.

THE GOOD-NATURED man who gives driving tests at the motor vehicles office is able to chuckle at the year's most harrowing experience.

A mammoth of a man, 6 foot 4 and 250 pounds, was not doing too well in his driving test. Said the examiner: "I'm afraid you'll have to come back for another try."

"All right," said the giant. "Then I won't stop." And he proceeded to circle the streets of San Rafael with grim determination. Several miles later he turns to the examiner, by now frozen in the seat, and snaps: "How am I doing now? Better?"

The examiner managed to jump out. The man didn't pass the test.

Western Alliance Political Climate Like That Of U.S. Before Election

WASHINGTON — During the past month I have been to London, Paris, Bonn, Brussels, and Rome seeking to understand what is going on within the Western Alliance.

It was soon evident that the political climate is rather like that of the United States in the year before a presidential election.

The big international issues are British entry into the Common Market, American relations with NATO, and Western relationsw ith the Soviet Union. These issues cannot at present be disentangled clearly from domestic politics.

This is certainly true in Great Britain, where the Macmillan government is facing elections in whichf oreign policy, and particularly the question of joining with the Common Market, are hot issues.

IT IS TRUE no less of West Germany where there is no clear successor to the Adenauer regime. It is true of Italy where the elections next spring will have great significance for the question, which is a European question, of whether Christian Democrats and Democratic Socialists can together form a stable government.

As for France, the elections have already taken place, and there is no dispute about the position of Gen. de Gaulle for the next few years. Nevertheless, the French future is not at all clearly defined. Gen. de Gaulle is leading a constitutional revolution which has no clear program and his government depends on him personally, not on a popular mandate.

THE GAULLIST movement is one of the great facts of life all over Western Europe. But because it is essentially a revolution against the conception of representative democracy, it is as yet an incalculable force.

With the exception of Gaullist France, the principal European governments are negotiating from weakness. In all of them the situation is fluid. Nobody can now foresee who will be in office two years hence, and what will be the form of the parties and factions which compose his government.

This is, I think, the key fact in the momentous negotiations—the word is not too strong—which are turning around the British application to join the European Economic Community. The essence of the matter becomes clearer if we are careful to think of the European Community rather than of its popular, but misleading name, the Common Market. The crucial question is whether Britain is to join a European political community and not whether it is to buy and sell in a bigger market.

THE EUROPEAN Economic Community has its capital in Brussels, and it is above everything else a political institution. It is the rudimentary living embryo of a new political entity.

It was promoted by men and it is now run by men from the nations of Western continental Europe which were first or last all defeated and occupied in the second World War.

The purpose of these men of the European Community is not merely to promote mass production in a big market, but to establish a new Europe which will carry on and promote the old European civilization.

The European Community is moved by high aspirations, and the decisive question about the British entry is whether Britain does and can share these aspirations.

"It was a dirty trick," Stuart declared, "bringing up an old case, branding a man all over the countryside as an ex-convict just for doing a patriotic service for me. He thought he was doing right and he was qualified by the county clerk as a deputy. It was a dirty trick."

IN THIS UNUSUAL situation of an election campaign coming over the holidays, may I take time out to wish all of you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year in which more people pay more attention to their governments and the men who run them.

Firemen, Police Knew Their Jobs

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

In the many years we have lived in Ross we have not had to call upon our fire department—until taday. We had an emergency. Fortunately, it was not serious, but it might have been.

We should like to go on record and compliment every single one of the men who came to help: the Fire Department officers themselves (and for the speed with which they arrived), and next the volunteers and the police. They all knew their jobs.

There were no unnecessary questions—in fact we had no time to thank them afterwards. The group as a unit was the most efficient we could imagine.

May we take this opportunity to thank them publicly for what they did not only for us but for our children, who might not otherwise have had a house in which to celebrate Christmas.

Item Sold Out Christmas Trees

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

Thank you for writing the article about me and my Christmas tree lot. I can actually say that it sold my trees for me.

On Thursday night I had 65 trees on my lot. At closing time, Friday night, the night the article appeared, I had 52 trees left on the lot. Saturday, at 4 o'clock, I was sold out.

Thank you again, gentlemen.

Children Don't Know Christmas

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

May I suggest that a newsman be sent out to interview children in the Bah Humbug area. Without fanfare or prearrangement ask these children for viewpoints on Christmas and what it means to them.

Without lead clauses, without suggestions, without putting words into their mouths, let them voice these stories. When finished, go back to your desk. Note the repetitious use of Santa Claus, presents, Christmas tree, etc., etc. These startling results should be published, truthfully, for all to read just as the Bah Humbug story was printed to sympathize with these "deluded" mothers who complained their children were asking for explanations. What should be so difficult about that?

The best way to explain would be to teach or explain the complete story of Christmas, the true unembellished version. Then escort these children through the shopping districts of any cosmopolitan city immediately, and through it all discourage any conversations about "who-is-going-to-get-what," etc., instead, answering all conversations about the "gimmies" with something pertaining to Bethlehem, Mary, Joseph, etc. If this excursion doesn't leave them with a true understanding of Bah Humbug, nothing else will. Their confusions will certainly be alerted.

Then I'd suggest interviewing these mothers and inquiring why their offspring know so much about baubles and so little about Bethlehem.

I asked 14 children in my area and one, a 10-year-old came up with a worthy story of Christmas.

A rich but well-seasoned old maid in Akron finally landed an eligible suitor. She was dreadfully near-sighted, but, knowing how much stock he put in perfect physical health, was resolved to conceal this defect from him by hook or crook. One day she surreptitiously fastened a diamond pin into a tree, and later, seated with her swain on a bench two hundred yards away, exclaimed, "Look, darling. Is that not a diamond sparkling in yonder oak tree?"

"I'm sure I couldn't see a diamond as far away as that," he marveled. "I'll get it for you," she volunteered happily, and arose to retrieve it.

Suddenly her house of cards collapsed. She tripped over a cow.

"Have you ever driven a car?" a state examiner asked a lady who was applying for her first license. "Over 50,000 miles," piped up the lady's husband bitterly, "and never had a hand on a wheel."

Western Alliance Political Climate Like That Of U.S. Before Election

WASHINGTON — During the past month I have been to London, Paris, Bonn, Brussels, and Rome seeking to understand what is going on within the Western Alliance.

It was soon evident that the political climate is rather like that of the United States in the year before a presidential election.

The big international issues are British entry into the Common Market, American relations with NATO, and Western relationsw ith the Soviet Union. These issues cannot at present be disentangled clearly from domestic politics.

This is certainly true in Great Britain, where the Macmillan government is facing elections in whichf oreign policy, and particularly the question of joining with the Common Market, are hot issues.

IT IS TRUE no less of West Germany where there is no clear successor to the Adenauer regime. It is true of Italy where the elections next spring will have great significance for the question, which is a European question, of whether Christian Democrats and Democratic Socialists can together form a stable government.

As for France, the elections have already taken place, and there is no dispute about the position of Gen. de Gaulle for the next few years. Nevertheless, the French future is not at all clearly defined. Gen. de Gaulle is leading a constitutional revolution which has no clear program and his government depends on him personally, not on a popular mandate.

THE GAULLIST movement is one of the great facts of life all over Western Europe. But because it is essentially a revolution against the conception of representative democracy, it is as yet an incalculable force.

With the exception of Gaullist France, the principal European governments are negotiating from weakness. In all of them the situation is fluid. Nobody can now foresee who will be in office two years hence, and what will be the form of the parties and factions which compose his government.

This is, I think, the key fact in the momentous negotiations—the word is not too strong—which are turning around the British application to join the European Economic Community. The essence of the matter becomes clearer if we are careful to think of the European Community rather than of its popular, but misleading name, the Common Market. The crucial question is whether Britain is to join a European political community and not whether it is to buy and sell in a bigger market.

THE EUROPEAN Economic Community has its capital in Brussels, and it is above everything else a political institution. It is the rudimentary living embryo of a new political entity.

It was promoted by men and it is now run by men from the nations of Western continental Europe which were first or last all defeated and occupied in the second World War.

The purpose of these men of the European Community is not merely to promote mass production in a big market, but to establish a new Europe which will carry on and promote the old European civilization.

The European Community is moved by high aspirations, and the decisive question about the British entry is whether Britain does and can share these aspirations.

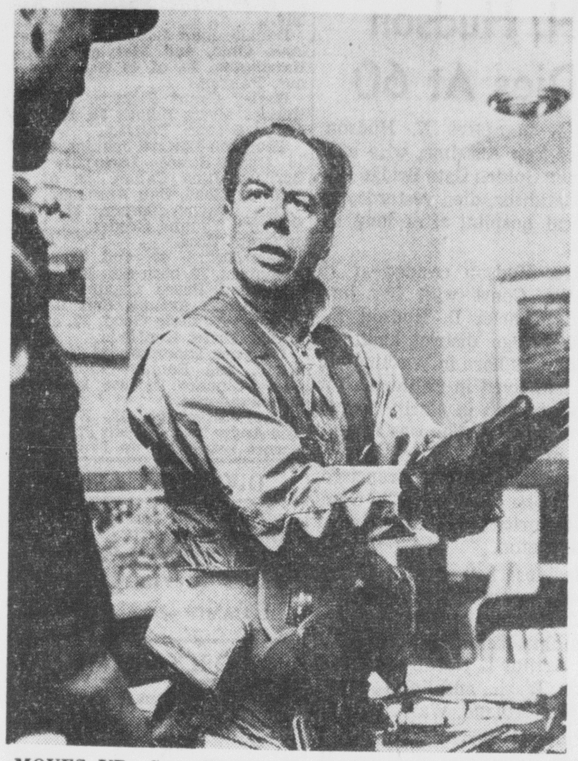
Kuchel Reaches Stardom On GOP National Stage



MOVES UP—Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel (R-Calif.), pictured here as he prepared to fly to Washington, D.C., at the beginner of the Cuba crisis, has moved up to stardom in national Republican politics. (UPI photo)

WASHINGTON (UPI)—It has been a long, slow road for Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel but the hard-working California Republican is finally blossoming into stardom on the GOP national stage.

His decisive re-election victory in California sent his political star soaring high on the national scene.

He disavows any presidential aspirations for 1964 but the 52-year-old Senate Republican whip automatically looms as a prominent possibility for the GOP vice presidential nomination. He rates strong political respect as a Republican who has carried California three times in eight years in keeping his Senate seat.

The names of New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.), Gov.-Elect William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania and Gov.-Elect George Romney of Michigan dominate current speculation on the 1964 GOP presidential nominee.

Geography, if nothing else, would tend to eliminate a Goldwater-Kuchel ticket.

But Rockefeller or Scranton and possibly Romney would likely look to the West for a running mate. And tall in the saddle on that horizon are Kuchel and handsome young Gov. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, who also was impressively re-elected in November.

Hatfield, only 40 now, would offer youth plus gubernatorial experience. But Oregon's six electoral votes look thin alongside California's vital 40, second only to New York. And Kuchel's role in the Senate leadership is a better spotlighted national forum for the next two years than the Salem, Ore., statehouse.

Kuchel's clearcut defeat of Democratic State Sen. Richard Richards in November was all the more impressive because he bucked the tide when California Republicans were losing ground in congressional seats and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon was skidding to political oblivion in a losing bid for the governorship.

The California Senator, whose home town of Anaheim is better known for Disneyland than for Kuchel, began his political career with election to the State Assembly in 1936, one year after finishing law school. He served two terms, moved up to the State Senate in 1940 and was re-elected in 1944 while away on World War II duty as a Naval Reserve officer. He has never lost an election.

Gov. Earl Warren—now chief justice of the United States—named him state controller in 1964 when the incumbent died. Kuchel won the office on his own later that year and was re-elected in 1950.

In late 1952, Warren appointed Kuchel to the U. S. Senate after Nixon was elected vice president. Nixon resigned his Senate seat shortly before his inauguration in a move which cost him money on his congressional pension but gave Kuchel an edge in valuable seniority over other incoming senators.

But freshman Kuchel often found his early Senate days more harassing than rewarding.

He was caught in tug-of-war power splits between Nixon and then Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif.) who became the Senate GOP leader. Warren soon arrived as chief justice and Kuchel found himself even further in the background.

Although Warren has kept hands off, Kuchel has an undisguised loyalty to his political mentor and benefactor and through the years has fiercely defended the chief justice from all attacks.

There also was party infighting in California and Kuchel at times had to weather the cross-fire in feuding among Nixon, Knowland and Gov. Goodwin J. Knight, who had succeeded Warren. What's more, he faced the immediate task of winning re-election in 1954 to the remaining two years of Nixon's old term.

But Tommy Kuchel won, defeating then Rep. Samuel W. Yorty (D-Calif.), now the mayor of Los Angeles, in a contest that one observer described as "distinguished only for its dullness."

Knowland and Knight went down together in 1958 in a statewide debacle for the GOP. Knowland left the Senate to run for governor and was swamped by Democrat Edmund G. Brown. Knight was forced into the Senate race and also was crushed in the landslide.

In 1956, Kuchel finally won a full six-year Senate term, and a little breathing space, by defeating Richards. He rang up a repeat performance over the same foe in November.

In the latter campaign, Kuchel's popularity even with Democrats was perhaps best pointed up by Brown in a slip of the tongue. Near the end of his successful re-election campaign against Nixon, Brown urged voters to send more Democrats to Congress — and went on to list Tommy Kuchel among them.

Kuchel is generally grouped with the Senate's GOP liberal bloc. But "moderate" is probably a more accurate tag for his overall record.

He supported the liberals' losing effort to elect Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky.) as Senate GOP leader in 1959. But the party caucus then elected Kuchel as whip, or assistant leader, where he has worked harmoniously with Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois. Cooper has already proposed a Rockefeller-Kuchel ticket as the GOP's best hope for 1964.

Kuchel was born and reared in Anaheim, the grandson of a German immigrant printer-lithographer who went to San Francisco during the Gold Rush days and later moved to Southern California. Until recently, the senator and his brother owned a weekly newspaper in Anaheim which their father had operated.

Kuchel also maintains a home in Washington, D. C., with his handsome, silver blonde wife, Betty, and their daughter, Karen, 16.

The Californian is personally popular with his colleagues, a hearty, amiable man who loves a good laugh and a good story, whether he's talking or listening.

U. S., Britain In Nuclear Pact

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The British navy began coming out of a long eclipse this week.

Once it had been a great armada that had inspired the writing of "Rule Britannia! Britannia rules the waves."

During World War I and in the days preceding World War II, the British Navy was referred to "America's first line of defense."

But as World War II progressed, the proud navy yielded its importance to the Royal Air Force.

And in the postwar years, when the British Empire started shrinking with its loss of India and other colonial possession, the need for great fleets lessened.

Somewhat ironically, advances in the air era will make it possible for the British Navy to regain some of its lost glory.

Britain had put all its defensive eggs in an air basket. It planned to build a nuclear deterrent by equipping its obsolescent jet bombers with a U. S.-built missile named Skybolt.

But Skybolt failed to pass its test and the United States felt it would be unwise to continue this project, much to the distress of the British. At one time there were threats of a massive change in Anglo-American relations because of the decision to scrap Skybolt.

At a conference in the Bahamas this week President John F. Kennedy and Prime Minister Harold Macmillan resolved the issue. The United States will equip the British Navy with the deadly Polaris missile which is a proven success. With U. S. help, Britain will build submarines capable of launching the missile but must furnish its own warheads.

This means that eventually the Royal Air Force bomber command will cease to exist as the most important striking force and that again the navy will have its day.

Investigation Costs Rising

By Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — The 87th Congress set aside more money than an other — 15.5 million dollars—for investigations by its committees.

In the 12-year period from 1951 to 1962, Congressional Quarterly studies show, Congress increased its investigations funds by 172.4 per cent, from $5,700,870 for the 82nd Congress (1951-52) to $15,526,500 for the 87th.

Senate and House committees investigate hundreds of subjects every year — everything from stockpiling to subversion, from polluted waters to progress in exploring space.

Some investigations result in legislation. For example, more examination of the pros and cons of national tax policy next year will preface the writing of tax reform legislation, which may include a tax cut.

Some investigations just produce a body of testimony, much of it grist for the nation's newspaper headlines. The recent House Un-American Activities Committee probe of "peace" groups falls into this category.

But all cost money. Much of it is spent in travel and interviews by committee members or committee staff. Many investigations require the services of special counsel and this is part of the cost.

The leading spender among committees was the Senate Judiciary Committee, authorized $3,541,500. As of the end of last year, it reported spending $1,320,506. The Senate does not list spending figures until after the end of each year, but the judiciary committee has been investigating at a continued high rate, so the rate of spending should remain highest in Congress.

Here's a run-down of how Senate Judiciary spends its funds:

Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee, Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn) chairman: Hearings on price fixing, packaging and labeling, drug manufacturing, and control and ownership of the space communications satellite.

Constitution Rights Subcommittee, Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.) chairman: rights of the mentally ill, rights of the American Indian, constitutional rights of military personnel.

Internal Security Subcommittee, Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss) chairman: fair play for Cuba committee, Communist propaganda and U.S. mails, Communist appeal to youth organizations, Communist threat to U.S. through the Caribbean, Communist crowd-handling methods, Communist Party line, Communism in Yugoslavia, and attempts of the pro-Castro forces to pervert the American press.

Juvenile delinquency subcommittee, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (D-Conn) chairman: crime TV programs, narcotics.

Refugees and escapees subcommittee, Sen. Philip A. Hart (D-Mich) chairman: Hong Kong. (These hearings were held in Washington.)

And the full judiciary committee investigated steel companies' response to subpoenas issued by the antitrust and monopoly subcommittee to appear and produce certain steel costs data.

Billie Sol Estes put a dent in the funds of House and Senate high-spending committees. The Senate Government Operations Committee spent $472,489 and the House Government Operations Committee spent $692,908 investigating the Texas promoter's complicated dealings.

Lyndon Johnson Taking Quiet, Vital Role In Policy Making

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — In quiet contrast to the fanfare which marked his years as a Senate leader, Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson is digging deeper into government than any predecessor.

With the encouragement of President John F. Kennedy, Johnson has branched out from the relative vicinity of his constitutional duty of presiding over the Senate to take a hand in major administrative fields.

By all appearances, Johnson, the one-time whip-cracker of the Senate has become a cheerful lieutenant to the man he once thought was too inexperienced to be president.

Kennedy has gone out of the way to reciprocate by giving Johnson on-the-job training in the executive department far beyond that to which former Vice President Richard M. Nixon pointed in his unsuccessful bid for the presidency in 1960.

If Johnson sometimes dreams of 1968 and the Democratic presidential nomination, he hardly could be faulted.

The restless energy which always has driven the rangy Texan spills out now in his work as a member of the "insiders" executive committee of the National Security Council, his statutory task of presiding over the Space Advisory Council, his chairmanship of the committee on equal employment opportunities, his job as head of the Peace Corps Advisory Council and his participation in cabinet sessions.

Kennedy has sent Johnson as his representative to 22 foreign countries and tabbed him to preside over an international manpower conference.

In other days, it used to be something of a news story when a vice president was called to the White House to confer with his chief. Johnson is in and out of the place almost daily.

The big difference is that he uses the back door and reporters get no chance to see him. He thus clothes his activities in a previously uncharacteristic anonymity that promotes such cocktail hour quips as "whatever became of Lyndon."

To a politician accustomed to having his views displayed fairly often in page one headlines, this may be difficult to swallow. But it has its compensations in the knowledge that he is participating in high policy decisions.

Algerian Independence Is Turning Sour

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — A green and white flag with blood-red crescent and star floats today where the French tri-color flew for 132 years over the gleaming white hillside city of Algiers.

It is the flag of Algerian independence—an independence that has turned sour in five short months.

Political confusion, a floundering, half-abandoned administrative system, a ruined economy that survives solely on foreign handouts, mass unemployment, hunger, the panic flight of 800,000 out of one million Europeans — these are the legacy of five months of freedom coming on the heels of seven years of war with France.

That is why nine million Algerians, who went wild in the first exaltation of freedom from French rule last July, now are left with little but the hangover. It is why they face 1963 with misgivings and anxiety.

Superficially, Algeria—or at least such big cities as Algiers and Oran—have returned to normal. The violence, the bombings and killings by the terrorists of the Moslem National Liberation Front (FLN) and the European Secret Army Organization (OAS), now are like a bad dream. Houses wrecked by plastic bombs have been patched up. Traffic in downtown Algiers is as dense as ever.

But the blue-uniformed European traffic policemen have been replaced by khaki-clad Algerians. Most of the stores which remained closed all summer when their European owners fled, have been reopened—many of them run by Algerian managers. But they are short of goods and prices have skyrocketed for almost everything.

Perhaps the thing that strikes one most in this city that once had a mixed population of 450,000 Europeans and 450,000 Moslems is the few Europeans to be seen. Bab-el-Oued, the Algiers district where tens of thousands of poor whites once lived, now has changed populations almost completely. Moslem refugees and their families have taken over the little apartments that belonged to Europeans.

The same tale is told in Oran, once the city with the second largest European population. In the other Algerian cities the Europeans have virtually disappeared.

The Europeans owned something like 60 per cent of the country's businesses and economy. Today, with the bulk of the Europeans gone, there is no one to provide work for the Algerian workers.

In the so-called "bled" or country districts, the situation is even more tragic. Villages razed by the French Army or the former rebel guerrillas still are gaunt piles of rubble, abandoned by their inhabitants.

Tens of thousands of Arab peasants, hollow-eyed and half-starved, live in brown tent camps besides streams, raising a few emaciated goats and waiting for gifts of flour and beans from the United States, France and the Communist bloc countries.

Russian food shipments arrive from time to time with a great propaganda fanfare. But it is American emergency food supplies that largely are keeping Algerians alive at all.

Starvation has touched off a new mass emigration to France of Moslem Algerians and their families.

French authorities estimate that about 6,000 Algerians are emigrating weekly.

The economic chaos is matched by the young nation's political difficulties. These began even before independence, when the former rebel exile leaders in Tunis, Morocco and Tripoli split into hostile camps. For three months from July to late September the country teetered on the brink of civil war. Only with difficulty did Premier Ahmed Ben Bella finally assert himself as the nation's recognized leader. But Ben Bella's own position remains precarious. He is torn between extreme leftists and those who favor steering a middle-line course between east and west.

There also is an ugly legacy of violence. According to French authorities, 1,800 Europeans have "disappeared" since last spring. The French fear most of them have been kidnaped and murdered.

WASHINGTON — The 87th Congress set aside more money than an other — 15.5 million dollars—for investigations by its committees.

In the 12-year period from 1951 to 1962, Congressional Quarterly studies show, Congress increased its investigations funds by 172.4 per cent, from $5,700,870 for the 82nd Congress (1951-52) to $15,526,500 for the 87th.

Senate and House committees investigate hundreds of subjects every year — everything from stockpiling to subversion, from polluted waters to progress in exploring space.

Some investigations result in legislation. For example, more examination of the pros and cons of national tax policy next year will preface the writing of tax reform legislation, which may include a tax cut.

Some investigations just produce a body of testimony, much of it grist for the nation's newspaper headlines. The recent House Un-American Activities Committee probe of "peace" groups falls into this category.

But all cost money. Much of it is spent in travel and interviews by committee members or committee staff. Many investigations require the services of special counsel and this is part of the cost.

The leading spender among committees was the Senate Judiciary Committee, authorized $3,541,500. As of the end of last year, it reported spending $1,320,506. The Senate does not list spending figures until after the end of each year, but the judiciary committee has been investigating at a continued high rate, so the rate of spending should remain highest in Congress.

Here's a run-down of how Senate Judiciary spends its funds:

Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee, Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn) chairman: Hearings on price fixing, packaging and labeling, drug manufacturing, and control and ownership of the space communications satellite.

Constitution Rights Subcommittee, Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.) chairman: rights of the mentally ill, rights of the American Indian, constitutional rights of military personnel.

Internal Security Subcommittee, Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss) chairman: fair play for Cuba committee, Communist propaganda and U.S. mails, Communist appeal to youth organizations, Communist threat to U.S. through the Caribbean, Communist crowd-handling methods, Communist Party line, Communism in Yugoslavia, and attempts of the pro-Castro forces to pervert the American press.

Juvenile delinquency subcommittee, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (D-Conn) chairman: crime TV programs, narcotics.

Refugees and escapees subcommittee, Sen. Philip A. Hart (D-Mich) chairman: Hong Kong. (These hearings were held in Washington.)

And the full judiciary committee investigated steel companies' response to subpoenas issued by the antitrust and monopoly subcommittee to appear and produce certain steel costs data.

Billie Sol Estes put a dent in the funds of House and Senate high-spending committees. The Senate Government Operations Committee spent $472,489 and the House Government Operations Committee spent $692,908 investigating the Texas promoter's complicated dealings.

Lyndon Johnson Taking Quiet, Vital Role In Policy Making

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — In quiet contrast to the fanfare which marked his years as a Senate leader, Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson is digging deeper into government than any predecessor.

With the encouragement of President John F. Kennedy, Johnson has branched out from the relative vicinity of his constitutional duty of presiding over the Senate to take a hand in major administrative fields.

By all appearances, Johnson, the one-time whip-cracker of the Senate has become a cheerful lieutenant to the man he once thought was too inexperienced to be president.

Kennedy has gone out of the way to reciprocate by giving Johnson on-the-job training in the executive department far beyond that to which former Vice President Richard M. Nixon pointed in his unsuccessful bid for the presidency in 1960.

If Johnson sometimes dreams of 1968 and the Democratic presidential nomination, he hardly could be faulted.

The restless energy which always has driven the rangy Texan spills out now in his work as a member of the "insiders" executive committee of the National Security Council, his statutory task of presiding over the Space Advisory Council, his chairmanship of the committee on equal employment opportunities, his job as head of the Peace Corps Advisory Council and his participation in cabinet sessions.

Kennedy has sent Johnson as his representative to 22 foreign countries and tabbed him to preside over an international manpower conference.

In other days, it used to be something of a news story when a vice president was called to the White House to confer with his chief. Johnson is in and out of the place almost daily.

The big difference is that he uses the back door and reporters get no chance to see him. He thus clothes his activities in a previously uncharacteristic anonymity that promotes such cocktail hour quips as "whatever became of Lyndon."

To a politician accustomed to having his views displayed fairly often in page one headlines, this may be difficult to swallow. But it has its compensations in the knowledge that he is participating in high policy decisions.

Algerian Independence Is Turning Sour

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — A green and white flag with blood-red crescent and star floats today where the French tri-color flew for 132 years over the gleaming white hillside city of Algiers.

It is the flag of Algerian independence—an independence that has turned sour in five short months.

Political confusion, a floundering, half-abandoned administrative system, a ruined economy that survives solely on foreign handouts, mass unemployment, hunger, the panic flight of 800,000 out of one million Europeans — these are the legacy of five months of freedom coming on the heels of seven years of war with France.

That is why nine million Algerians, who went wild in the first exaltation of freedom from French rule last July, now are left with little but the hangover. It is why they face 1963 with misgivings and anxiety.

Superficially, Algeria—or at least such big cities as Algiers and Oran—have returned to normal. The violence, the bombings and killings by the terrorists of the Moslem National Liberation Front (FLN) and the European Secret Army Organization (OAS), now are like a bad dream. Houses wrecked by plastic bombs have been patched up. Traffic in downtown Algiers is as dense as ever.

But the blue-uniformed European traffic policemen have been replaced by khaki-clad Algerians. Most of the stores which remained closed all summer when their European owners fled, have been reopened—many of them run by Algerian managers. But they are short of goods and prices have skyrocketed for almost everything.

Perhaps the thing that strikes one most in this city that once had a mixed population of 450,000 Europeans and 450,000 Moslems is the few Europeans to be seen. Bab-el-Oued, the Algiers district where tens of thousands of poor whites once lived, now has changed populations almost completely. Moslem refugees and their families have taken over the little apartments that belonged to Europeans.

The same tale is told in Oran, once the city with the second largest European population. In the other Algerian cities the Europeans have virtually disappeared.

The Europeans owned something like 60 per cent of the country's businesses and economy. Today, with the bulk of the Europeans gone, there is no one to provide work for the Algerian workers.

In the so-called "bled" or country districts, the situation is even more tragic. Villages razed by the French Army or the former rebel guerrillas still are gaunt piles of rubble, abandoned by their inhabitants.

Tens of thousands of Arab peasants, hollow-eyed and half-starved, live in brown tent camps besides streams, raising a few emaciated goats and waiting for gifts of flour and beans from the United States, France and the Communist bloc countries.

Russian food shipments arrive from time to time with a great propaganda fanfare. But it is American emergency food supplies that largely are keeping Algerians alive at all.

Starvation has touched off a new mass emigration to France of Moslem Algerians and their families.

French authorities estimate that about 6,000 Algerians are emigrating weekly.

The economic chaos is matched by the young nation's political difficulties. These began even before independence, when the former rebel exile leaders in Tunis, Morocco and Tripoli split into hostile camps. For three months from July to late September the country teetered on the brink of civil war. Only with difficulty did Premier Ahmed Ben Bella finally assert himself as the nation's recognized leader. But Ben Bella's own position remains precarious. He is torn between extreme leftists and those who favor steering a middle-line course between east and west.

There also is an ugly legacy of violence. According to French authorities, 1,800 Europeans have "disappeared" since last spring. The French fear most of them have been kidnaped and murdered.

False Report Of Shooting

A report of a shooting in Apartment C-47 in Marin City at 1:35 a.m. today proved to be false, sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputy Boyd Burnham, who investigated the report, found that there was no Apartment C-47. He did find Nathaniel Coleman, the man who reportedly did the shooting, in front of his home at Apartment C-44.

Coleman told the deputy that he had fired a cap pistol earlier in the evening. Burnham failed to find any weapon in a search of the apartment.

Resisted Arrest: Fine, Probation

San Anselmo cook Rolf Alfred Osterle, 27, who resisted arrest for speeding yesterday morning, drew a fine and one year probation yesterday afternoon in Marin Municipal Court.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson ordered him to pay $22 for speeding and $78.75 for resisting San Anselmo police.

resisting arrest, disturbing the peace, and drunkenness.

While being booked at the jail he reportedly attacked Deputy John Goff. It took Goof and two other deputies to subdue Wood, deputies said.

Among the injured was Raymond J. Miller, 20, a sailor from the USS Lowe. He has been staying with his mother at 1915 Bridgeway, Sausalito. He went to Marin General Hospital with a smashed right cheekbone, and transferred to Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco.

Louis Collins Hayes, Apt. A6, Building 43, Marin City also treated at Marin General Hospital, required 15 stitches for a gash in his forehead. He said he had been hit by a beer bottle swung by a man he identified as "Spot." However, when deputies tried to get more information from him, he refused to say anything.

Later, after Pig Haven was closed and the crowd dispersed, another fight with four or five Caucasians vs. eight to 10 Negroes broke out at nearby Juanita's Galley. Deputy Sheriff Ernest Nielsen said the Negroes all jumped over the ship's railing when he and two other deputies arrived.

Tryouts At Tam

Tryouts are being held at Tamalpais High School for the all-school production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible." Casting and rehearsal will continue during the Christmas holidays for the play to be presented March 1 and 2 in the Ruby Scott Auditorium. Daniel Caldwell, Tamalpais drama teacher, will direct.

Man Thrown To Pavement

Billy M. Clark, 44, of Bolinas Road, Fairfax, was treated for a broken right shoulder early today at Marin General Hospital after being thrown to the pavement of the Lucky Store parking lot at 720 Center Boulevard, Fairfax, by an unknown assailant.

Clark told police that he and Robert W. Johnson of the same address had emerged from the Drake Club at Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Pastori Avenue and entered their car in the parking lot when a small foreign car drove up with two men in it.

One of the men got out of the car and said, "You are in the Lucky lot. You can't park here." He ripped Clark's suit coat off and shoved him to the pavement, breaking his shoulder. The two men then drove away.

Warning On Congo

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Dispatch of a U.S. military survey mission to the Congo has brought a Soviet warning that the move could lead to serious results.

Soviet Chief Delegate Valerian A. Zorin blasted the action as he and U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson held separate news conferences yesterday to give their views on the 17th General Assembly session that just ended.

Stevenson said the eight-man mission led by Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman had been sent to strengthen Secretary General Thant's plans to end the secession of Katanga Province.

But Zorin accused the United States of embarking on "the road to direct subversion" of U.N. principles.

Nun Killed In Massive Auto Pileup

SANTA ANA (AP)—A Roman Catholic nun was killed and an estimated 50 persons were injured today in a massive, chain-reaction traffic pile-up on the fog-shrouded Santa Ana Freeway.

The California Highway Patrol said Sister Mary Refuge of the St. Francis Home in Santa Ana died in the series of rear-end collisions. She was a passenger in a car driven by Sister Angelina of the same address.

Officers said 150 to 200 vehicles were involved in crashes as the heavy fog settled over the busy freeway about eight miles south of Santa Ana.

Twenty-five tow trucks worked to clear away the wreckage, but traffic backed up for 12 miles. The freeway was closed for about two hours.

Wrecker crews stockpiled 57 demolished vehicles while 10 ambulances carried injured to local hospitals. Two fire trucks and two rescue units also were at the scene.

Another fog-caused smashup on Highway 101 four miles north of Oceanside injured 16 persons, the Highway Patrol said.

Traffic was snarled for more than an hour by about 30 wrecked cars.

Officers said the accidents apparently started when a truck-trailer rig skidded and blocked the highway. Cars then hit it from both directions.

CUBA

captives of the abortive invasion.

All government newspapers today headlined the signing of the agreement, emphasizing that the full price of 62 million dollars set by a revolutionary tribunal for "indemnities" on the prisoners will be met.

The Communist organ Hoy headlined: "The Indemnization for Damages to Cuba Will Be Satisfied . . . $62 Million."

The revolutionary tribunal which tried the prisoners placed "fines" or "indemnities" on their heads ranging from $25,000 to $500,000 each.

Donovan and members of the family committee were allowed to visit the prisoners in Principe last night and tell them that the agreement for their release had been signed.

"They received the news like soldiers, but they were overjoyed," a family committee spokesman said. Donovan talked with the elected cellblock chiefs, who broke the news to their companions.

Mrs. Berta Barreto, families committee resident member in Havana, said today Cuban officials indicated Monday's exchange will be operated on an airlshuttle basis, with prisoners being returned in the same aircraft which bring in the first shipments of goods.

In Miami, four DC-6s and DC-7s stood by at Opo Locka airfield to take aboard semiperishable cargo for the prisoner trade. This consists mainly of pharmaceutical supplies.

The American Red Cross charter freighter African Pilot was reported to be ready to depart from Miami tonight with the bulk of the barter supplies. It will take an estimated 15 hours for the ship to reach Havana harbor.

There was no indication in Havana that the exchange would start tomorrow instead of Monday as rumored in Miami.

Girl Injured As Auto Hits Mule

A 15-year-old girl suffered a broken collarbone yesterday when a car and a mule collided on the Novato Creek bridge on Highway 101, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Eileen Law of Guerneville was treated at Novato Hospital. She was a passenger in a car driven by Gary Kent Saxe, 17, also of Guerneville.

Officers said Saxe was southbound at 60 miles per hour when two mules owned by Donald Dustman, 2090 Novato Boulevard, ran into the roadway and headed toward him. Boxed in by the bridge railings, Saxe could not evade the animals.

The Marin County Humane Society assisted officers in rounding up the two mules and returning them to the owner. Saxe's car had to be towed to a garage.

Two women suffered minor injuries last night in a rear-end auto collision in heavy traffic on Highway 101 north of Rodeo Avenue, Sausalito. A car driven by Manuel M. Orolgas, 29, of San Francisco, hit one driven by Ivan W. Doerksew, 40, of 746 Calle de la Mesa, Novato. Angie Lewis, 29, of San Francisco, riding with Orolgas, was treated for a neck sprain at Marin General Hospital. Mrs. Doerksew was taken to a private physician.

Highway Patrolmen reported that Earl E. Duncan, 29, of 495 Ridge Road, Novato, was injured yesterday when his car hit a guard rail and rolled over on the San Geronimo Road at Petaluma-Point Reyes Road.

Duncan was taken to Novato Hospital by his wife, but refused treatment for facial cuts.

Yule Decoration Won By Juniors

The Junior class of Redwood High School won a $10 prize for having the best decorated hall in the school.

Each class is responsible for decorating a hall, carrying out the Christmas theme, during the week before Christmas vacation.

The halls were judged by art teachers Wallace E. McDonald, Thomas E. LaMontea, Ronald E. Hurt, and Marian duJardin. The judges felt the junior hall showed the most originality, work, and development of theme.

Dr. Suess' book, "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," was the theme for the junior hall. Darcy Kelly originated the idea and Jim Mogg drew pictures to accompany the story.

Three Injured In Truck Crash

Three San Francisco men were injured last night when their panel truck lost a wheel and overturned on Highway 101 on the Waldo Grade, according to the California Highway Patrol.

The driver, David Thomas, 22, suffered cuts, abrasions and a sprained back, the result of being thrown from the vehicle. He was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital.

Treated and released were Peter Loscutoff, 23, who had a cut right cheek, and James Fisher, 20, with blisters on his right foot.

Fog blanketed the area at the time of the accident, officers reported, but was not considered a factor.

New Fees For Bridge Towing

The state posted new fees today for towing vehicles off the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge.

The Division of Highways announced it will take over the job Jan. 1 from commercial operators in an effort to avoid delays in clearing the roadway.

The fees: Towing—cars, $5; trucks and buses, $7.50; tire changes—cars, $3; trucks and buses, $4 for outside or single-tired wheels, $5 for inside tires of duals; gasoline—50 cents a gallon.

Christmas In Jail For Driver

George Phipps, 54, of Fairfax must spend Christmas in jail for repeated drunken driving offenses.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Municipal Court yesterday sentenced him to five days in jail plus $276 fine for driving while intoxicated along Bolinas Road in Fairfax last Sept. 13.

Phipps had prior convictions in 1960, 1955 and 1941.

Fairfax Considers Parking Exemptions

The Fairfax Zoning Adjustment Board Thursday night considered 18 requests for exemptions from the city's parking ordinance permitting parking on streets between 2 and 6 a.m. because of hardships.

The board's recommendations on the permits and on six requests for encroachments and three zoning variances will be presented to the city council on Jan. 14.

STUART

Monday at the county clerk's office, so time was of the essence.

Robert D. Carrow, attorney for Kent, paraded a series of witnesses to back up his contention that many husbands and wives signed for their spouses, and that others had signed outside the presence of Harris, the verification deputy.

County Clerk Gnoss had received petitions of candidacy for Stuart bearing 283 signatures. He ruled out 55 because of various defects by the time he certified 212. He left the remaining 16 signatures unchecked.

In the course of yesterday's hearing, Judge Patterson ruled out 15 names of the 212 which Gnoss had certified.

Carrow argued unsuccessfully that this disqualified Stuart, contending that as the county clerk had verified only 212, and 15 of them were found invalid, the 16 names remaining could not be used.

Declared Judge Patterson:

"I don't think you can eliminate a candidate who has enough signatures on grounds that the county clerk did not check all the names."

He ruled that the 16 names still in the unchecked "pool" were presumed to be valid, and therefore Stuart had one more signature than necessary.

The challenge of Harris's right to circulate the petitions was rebutted when Weissich showed that last January, Judge Thomas F. Keating of Marin Superior Court suspended imposition of a state prison sentence before placing Harris on probation. Harris had been found guilty of forgery.

Weissich cited a 1953 attorney general's opinion by Edmund G. Brown, now governor. It held that a person convicted of a felony, but placed on probation without sentence being imposed, retains his right to vote. Any registered voter has the right to circulate petitions of candidacy.

Judge Patterson said he was satisfied with the opinion.

Stuart, questioned by Weissich, testified that Kent had tried to persuade him to get out of the Congress race and had said, "I will reimburse you for all the money you have spent up to this point."

Weissich declared this was a violation of the election code, and a felony.

Carrow suggested that if Weissich thought so, he should take the matter up with Dist. Atty. Roger P. Garety.

"I intend to do just that," asserted Weissich.

Kent, who did not take the stand, was absent when Weissich made the charge. He had attended part of the day-long hearing, but left for a speaking engagement in San Francisco during the afternoon.

Qualification of Stuart makes the congressional election a three-way race, the other candidates being Grader, of Fort Bragg, and Republican Donald H. Clausen of Crescent City.

Tax Collections Hit $14 Million

Marin County taxpayers paid more than 14 million dollars in property taxes before the Dec. 10 first installment deadline, Tax Collector M. F. Donohue reported yesterday.

Of a total tax bill of $25,836,422, the county collected $14,339,560, or 55.5 per cent. At this time last year, $12,378,985 had been collected of a total $21,811,456. Percentage of collection last year for the first installment was 56.75. Installment collections higher than 50 per cent indicate that some property owners pay their entire tax bills before the first deadline.

Second installments will be due April 10. Taxes not paid before installment deadlines are subject to 6 per cent penalty charges.

forced a delay until after completion of the meetings.

In order to launch the missile, the Air Force had to open the range—which had been closed for the Christmas holiday—and pay overtime wages to scores of tracking and support personnel.

Some Pentagon planners feel the missile has some tough technical problems which may take a long time solving. Sources report the rocket probably could not be operational until 1966, a full two years behind the original timetable.

Man Charged With Forgery

Oscar LaVerne Herriman, 37, was arrested at the home of his cousin in Seaside yesterday and returned to Marin County last night on a warrant charging him with five counts of check forgery.

Herriman's ex-wife, Betty Bacon of 1115 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Kentfield, signed a complaint charging him with forging her name to five checks, totaling $290, which he cashed at five stores in Kentfield, San Anselmo and Fairfax on Nov. 15, according to Asst. GLENWOOD HOME WINS IN COUNTY CONTEST

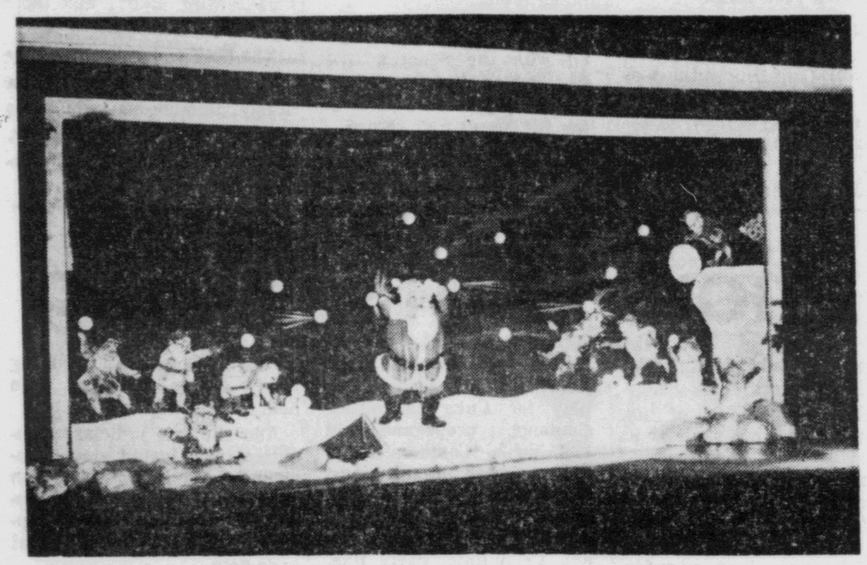
A Christmas scene in the window, candles in the yard, three kings of Orient on the garage door, and Santa Claus with his reindeer on the roof combined to win fourth place in the county-wide home Christmas decoration contest for the C. J. Phillips home at 220 Knight Drive, San Rafael.



GREENBRAE WINNER — The garage door of the W. J. Sadler home at 76 Almenar Drive, Greenbrae, became a Christmas scene of Santa Claus being snow-balled by elves to win first prize in the Christmas home decorating contest sponsored by the Greenbrae Home Owners Assn. (Independent-Journal photos)

WINS IN GLENWOOD CONTEST — First place in the Glenwood Home Owners Assn.'s own Christmas decorating contest went to the home of Frank Clark at 9 Ashwood Court, where effective use of lights and a Christmas tree framed by the picture window produced this effect.

False Report Of Shooting

A report of a shooting in Apartment C-47 in Marin City at 1:35 a.m. today proved to be false, sheriff's deputies reported.

Deputy Boyd Burnham, who investigated the report, found that there was no Apartment C-47. He did find Nathaniel Coleman, the man who reportedly did the shooting, in front of his home at Apartment C-44.

Coleman told the deputy that he had fired a cap pistol earlier in the evening. Burnham failed to find any weapon in a search of the apartment.

San Anselmo cook Rolf Alfred Osterle, 27, who resisted arrest for speeding yesterday morning, drew a fine and one year probation yesterday afternoon in Marin Municipal Court.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson ordered him to pay $22 for speeding and $78.75 for resisting San Anselmo police.

resisting arrest, disturbing the peace, and drunkenness.

While being booked at the jail he reportedly attacked Deputy John Goff. It took Goof and two other deputies to subdue Wood, deputies said.

Among the injured was Raymond J. Miller, 20, a sailor from the USS Lowe. He has been staying with his mother at 1915 Bridgeway, Sausalito. He went to Marin General Hospital with a smashed right cheekbone, and transferred to Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco.

Louis Collins Hayes, Apt. A6, Building 43, Marin City also treated at Marin General Hospital, required 15 stitches for a gash in his forehead. He said he had been hit by a beer bottle swung by a man he identified as "Spot." However, when deputies tried to get more information from him, he refused to say anything.

Later, after Pig Haven was closed and the crowd dispersed, another fight with four or five Caucasians vs. eight to 10 Negroes broke out at nearby Juanita's Galley. Deputy Sheriff Ernest Nielsen said the Negroes all jumped over the ship's railing when he and two other deputies arrived.

Tryouts At Tam

Tryouts are being held at Tamalpais High School for the all-school production of Arthur Miller's "The Crucible." Casting and rehearsal will continue during the Christmas holidays for the play to be presented March 1 and 2 in the Ruby Scott Auditorium. Daniel Caldwell, Tamalpais drama teacher, will direct.

Man Thrown To Pavement

Billy M. Clark, 44, of Bolinas Road, Fairfax, was treated for a broken right shoulder early today at Marin General Hospital after being thrown to the pavement of the Lucky Store parking lot at 720 Center Boulevard, Fairfax, by an unknown assailant.

Clark told police that he and Robert W. Johnson of the same address had emerged from the Drake Club at Sir Francis Drake Boulevard and Pastori Avenue and entered their car in the parking lot when a small foreign car drove up with two men in it.

One of the men got out of the car and said, "You are in the Lucky lot. You can't park here." He ripped Clark's suit coat off and shoved him to the pavement, breaking his shoulder. The two men then drove away.

Warning On Congo

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Dispatch of a U.S. military survey mission to the Congo has brought a Soviet warning that the move could lead to serious results.

Soviet Chief Delegate Valerian A. Zorin blasted the action as he and U.S. Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson held separate news conferences yesterday to give their views on the 17th General Assembly session that just ended.

Stevenson said the eight-man mission led by Lt. Gen. Louis W. Truman had been sent to strengthen Secretary General Thant's plans to end the secession of Katanga Province.

But Zorin accused the United States of embarking on "the road to direct subversion" of U.N. principles.

Girl Injured As Auto Hits Mule

A 15-year-old girl suffered a broken collarbone yesterday when a car and a mule collided on the Novato Creek bridge on Highway 101, the California Highway Patrol reported.

Eileen Law of Guerneville was treated at Novato Hospital. She was a passenger in a car driven by Gary Kent Saxe, 17, also of Guerneville.

Officers said Saxe was southbound at 60 miles per hour when two mules owned by Donald Dustman, 2090 Novato Boulevard, ran into the roadway and headed toward him. Boxed in by the bridge railings, Saxe could not evade the animals.

The Marin County Humane Society assisted officers in rounding up the two mules and returning them to the owner. Saxe's car had to be towed to a garage.

Two women suffered minor injuries last night in a rear-end auto collision in heavy traffic on Highway 101 north of Rodeo Avenue, Sausalito. A car driven by Manuel M. Orolgas, 29, of San Francisco, hit one driven by Ivan W. Doerksew, 40, of 746 Calle de la Mesa, Novato. Angie Lewis, 29, of San Francisco, riding with Orolgas, was treated for a neck sprain at Marin General Hospital. Mrs. Doerksew was taken to a private physician.

Highway Patrolmen reported that Earl E. Duncan, 29, of 495 Ridge Road, Novato, was injured yesterday when his car hit a guard rail and rolled over on the San Geronimo Road at Petaluma-Point Reyes Road.

Duncan was taken to Novato Hospital by his wife, but refused treatment for facial cuts.

Nun Killed In Massive Auto Pileup

SANTA ANA (AP)—A Roman Catholic nun was killed and an estimated 50 persons were injured today in a massive, chain-reaction traffic pile-up on the fog-shrouded Santa Ana Freeway.

The California Highway Patrol said Sister Mary Refuge of the St. Francis Home in Santa Ana died in the series of rear-end collisions. She was a passenger in a car driven by Sister Angelina of the same address.

Officers said 150 to 200 vehicles were involved in crashes as the heavy fog settled over the busy freeway about eight miles south of Santa Ana.

Twenty-five tow trucks worked to clear away the wreckage, but traffic backed up for 12 miles. The freeway was closed for about two hours.

Wrecker crews stockpiled 57 demolished vehicles while 10 ambulances carried injured to local hospitals. Two fire trucks and two rescue units also were at the scene.

Another fog-caused smashup on Highway 101 four miles north of Oceanside injured 16 persons, the Highway Patrol said.

Traffic was snarled for more than an hour by about 30 wrecked cars.

Officers said the accidents apparently started when a truck-trailer rig skidded and blocked the highway. Cars then hit it from both directions.

CUBA

captives of the abortive invasion.

All government newspapers today headlined the signing of the agreement, emphasizing that the full price of 62 million dollars set by a revolutionary tribunal for "indemnities" on the prisoners will be met.

The Communist organ Hoy headlined: "The Indemnization for Damages to Cuba Will Be Satisfied . . . $62 Million."

The revolutionary tribunal which tried the prisoners placed "fines" or "indemnities" on their heads ranging from $25,000 to $500,000 each.

Donovan and members of the family committee were allowed to visit the prisoners in Principe last night and tell them that the agreement for their release had been signed.

"They received the news like soldiers, but they were overjoyed," a family committee spokesman said. Donovan talked with the elected cellblock chiefs, who broke the news to their companions.

Mrs. Berta Barreto, families committee resident member in Havana, said today Cuban officials indicated Monday's exchange will be operated on an air1shuttle basis, with prisoners being returned in the same aircraft which bring in the first shipments of goods.

In Miami, four DC-6s and DC-7s stood by at Opo Locka airfield to take aboard semiperishable cargo for the prisoner trade. This consists mainly of pharmaceutical supplies.

The American Red Cross charter freighter African Pilot was reported to be ready to depart from Miami tonight with the bulk of the barter supplies. It will take an estimated 15 hours for the ship to reach Havana harbor.

There was no indication in Havana that the exchange would start tomorrow instead of Monday as rumored in Miami.

Yule Decoration Won By Juniors

The Junior class of Redwood High School won a $10 prize for having the best decorated hall in the school.

Each class is responsible for decorating a hall, carrying out the Christmas theme, during the week before Christmas vacation.

The halls were judged by art teachers Wallace E. McDonald, Thomas E. LaMontea, Ronald E. Hurt, and Marian duJardin. The judges felt the junior hall showed the most originality, work, and development of theme.

Dr. Suess' book, "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," was the theme for the junior hall. Darcy Kelly originated the idea and Jim Mogg drew pictures to accompany the story.

Three Injured In Truck Crash

Three San Francisco men were injured last night when their panel truck lost a wheel and overturned on Highway 101 on the Waldo Grade, according to the California Highway Patrol.

The driver, David Thomas, 22, suffered cuts, abrasions and a sprained back, the result of being thrown from the vehicle. He was reported in good condition today at Marin General Hospital.

Treated and released were Peter Loscutoff, 23, who had a cut right cheek, and James Fisher, 20, with blisters on his right foot.

Fog blanketed the area at the time of the accident, officers reported, but was not considered a factor.

New Fees For Bridge Towing

The state posted new fees today for towing vehicles off the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge.

The Division of Highways announced it will take over the job Jan. 1 from commercial operators in an effort to avoid delays in clearing the roadway.

The fees: Towing—cars, $5; trucks and buses, $7.50; tire changes—cars, $3; trucks and buses, $4 for outside or single-tired wheels, $5 for inside tires of duals; gasoline—50 cents a gallon.

Christmas In Jail For Driver

George Phipps, 54, of Fairfax must spend Christmas in jail for repeated drunken driving offenses.

Judge Joseph G. Wilson of Marin Municipal Court yesterday sentenced him to five days in jail plus $276 fine for driving while intoxicated along Bolinas Road in Fairfax last Sept. 13.

Phipps had prior convictions in 1960, 1955 and 1941.

Fairfax Considers Parking Exemptions

The Fairfax Zoning Adjustment Board Thursday night considered 18 requests for exemptions from the city's parking ordinance permitting parking on streets between 2 and 6 a.m. because of hardships.

The board's recommendations on the permits and on six requests for encroachments and three zoning variances will be presented to the city council on Jan. 14.

Monday at the county clerk's office, so time was of the essence.

Robert D. Carrow, attorney for Kent, paraded a series of witnesses to back up his contention that many husbands and wives signed for their spouses, and that others had signed outside the presence of Harris, the verification deputy.

County Clerk Gnoss had received petitions of candidacy for Stuart bearing 283 signatures. He ruled out 55 because of various defects by the time he certified 212. He left the remaining 16 signatures unchecked.

In the course of yesterday's hearing, Judge Patterson ruled out 15 names of the 212 which Gnoss had certified.

Carrow argued unsuccessfully that this disqualified Stuart, contending that as the county clerk had verified only 212, and 15 of them were found invalid, the 16 names remaining could not be used.

Declared Judge Patterson:

"I don't think you can eliminate a candidate who has enough signatures on grounds that the county clerk did not check all the names."

He ruled that the 16 names still in the unchecked "pool" were presumed to be valid, and therefore Stuart had one more signature than necessary.

The challenge of Harris's right to circulate the petitions was rebutted when Weissich showed that last January, Judge Thomas F. Keating of Marin Superior Court suspended imposition of a state prison sentence before placing Harris on probation. Harris had been found guilty of forgery.

Weissich cited a 1953 attorney general's opinion by Edmund G. Brown, now governor. It held that a person convicted of a felony, but placed on probation without sentence being imposed, retains his right to vote. Any registered voter has the right to circulate petitions of candidacy.

Judge Patterson said he was satisfied with the opinion.

Stuart, questioned by Weissich, testified that Kent had tried to persuade him to get out of the Congress race and had said, "I will reimburse you for all the money you have spent up to this point."

Weissich declared this was a violation of the election code, and a felony.

Carrow suggested that if Weissich thought so, he should take the matter up with Dist. Atty. Roger P. Garety.

"I intend to do just that," asserted Weissich.

Kent, who did not take the stand, was absent when Weissich made the charge. He had attended part of the day-long hearing, but left for a speaking engagement in San Francisco during the afternoon.

Qualification of Stuart makes the congressional election a three-way race, the other candidates being Grader, of Fort Bragg, and Republican Donald H. Clausen of Crescent City.

Tax Collections Hit $14 Million

Marin County taxpayers paid more than 14 million dollars in property taxes before the Dec. 10 first installment deadline, Tax Collector M. F. Donohue reported yesterday.

Of a total tax bill of $25,836,422, the county collected $14,339,560, or 55.5 per cent. At this time last year, $12,378,985 had been collected of a total $21,811,456. Percentage of collection last year for the first installment was 56.75. Installment collections higher than 50 per cent indicate that some property owners pay their entire tax bills before the first deadline.

Second installments will be due April 10. Taxes not paid before installment deadlines are subject to 6 per cent penalty charges.

forced a delay until after completion of the meetings.

In order to launch the missile, the Air Force had to open the range—which had been closed for the Christmas holiday—and pay overtime wages to scores of tracking and support personnel.

Some Pentagon planners feel the missile has some tough technical problems which may take a long time solving. Sources report the rocket probably could not be operational until 1966, a full two years behind the original timetable.

Man Charged With Forgery

Oscar LaVerne Herriman, 37, was arrested at the home of his cousin in Seaside yesterday and returned to Marin County last night on a warrant charging him with five counts of check forgery.

Herriman's ex-wife, Betty Bacon of 1115 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Kentfield, signed a complaint charging him with forging her name to five checks, totaling $290, which he cashed at five stores in Kentfield, San Anselmo and Fairfax on Nov. 15, according to Asst. Police Chief Sam N. Serio of San Anselmo.

Application Filed For New Bank

Application has been filed by five Marin County residents for a national charter to open an independent bank in Tiburon, it was learned today.

Those signing the application were Charles Tijerina of Belvedere, land owner and developer with office in Tiburon; Mrs. James L. Heynemann of Belvedere; Fred Mantegani, Tiburon merchant; Paul R. Leahy of San Rafael, vice president and manager of Title Insurance and Trust Co., and Lawrence A. Mayer of Kentfield, Mill Valley merchant.

Signers said that at this time there are no officers, the proposed institution has no name as yet, and no information on proposed capitalization is available at this time.

The application was made to the San Francisco office of the federal comptroller of the currency.

If approved, this would be the first independently owned bank on the Tiburon Peninsula. A branch of Crocker-Anglo National Bank is on the Boardwalk in Belvedere.

If the charter is approved, it is understood to be the intention to open in the old bank building at the end of Tiburon's Main Street. Now unoccupied, this building was originally the home of a branch of the Bank of Sausalito in 1922, and later of the American Trust Co., now merged with Wells-Fargo Bank.

Leadership Awards Due From Elks

Announcement of Elks Club leadership awards to a boy and a girl high school student in Marin County will be made next Feb. 29, according to John Clahan, San Rafael Elks Lodge award chairman.

Two awards will be made to Marin County youngsters regardless of the outcome of the national judging, Clahan said. But if a local student should turn out to be a national winner, an additional award would be made in Marin County.

Awards will be based on a combination of leadership ability, interest in citizenship, and record in school, church and community activities, said Clahan.

Marin Pollution Inspector Named

Paul Brand, inspector for the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, has been assigned fulltime as inspector for Marin County.

He has been with the district since July. He has set up an office in the county health department's sanitation division at the Civic Center.

Brand will observe industrial, commercial and institutional operations subject to district regulations. He will check also on any smog complaints in the county.

Brand is a resident of San Anselmo and is public information chairman of the Marin Cancer Society.

Human Element Called Cause Of Accidents On Highways

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK (UPI) — On the eve of another protracted holiday weekend psychological scientists wished everyone could be made to realize "the human element" is responsible for at least 80 per cent of the usual slaughter by accidents on the highways and elsewhere.

That's highly contrary to the view of non-scientific people who like to think the elements of chance and luck are responsible for much of it. This makes the scientific wish a loving Christmas wish for suffering mankind. "The human element" can be controlled by human beings. The others can't be.

Psychological scientists consider their case to be one of facts gathered in years of scientific study of accidents and the people who have them. Dr. Bernice C. Sachs, an authority on psychosomatics — the influence of mind on body responses—summed up the case in a recent lecture.

Most people responsible for accidents are of similar personality type, she said. They are inclined to be "inattentive, hurried, worried and subject to mental tensions."

Beneath this surface are "deep-lying mental attitudes, including fear, depressions, constant grudges, resentment toward bosses, domestic troubles, chronic alcoholism.

"They are sometimes exhilerated and unduly emotional. They may have an inferiority complex or an 'it can't happen to me' complex. All these, as well as mental fatigue, expose them to undue hazards."

Two things are necessary to operate a complex machine, say an automobile, safely. One are good reflexes and they are part of the body's automatic capabilities —the others are emotions and attitudes which have to be sound, too.

In the view of psychosomatic science, the so-called "accident-prone" people are "aggressive, impulsive, and indifferent."

"They become preoccupied while driving — preoccupied with problems of health, home, work and money and they may be disturbed by frustration and failure," she continued. "As a result they are less alert to environmental hazards and less able to utilize effectively the knowledge, judgment and skills they have previously utilized for safety."

Scientifically it is impossible to consider accidents to be "fortuitous events and the inevitable price to be paid for technological advancement." Scientifically accidents are preventable "and causes that were heretofore regarded as being beyond the control of the individual are now seen in many cases to be intimately related to his psycho-physiological (mind-body) make-up."

"We know, for example, that people can behave safely in an unsafe environment, such as a puddler in a steel mill, and unsafely in a relatively safe environment, such as a housewife in the kitchen."

Doctor Sachs acknowledged there is controversy in science as to the precise point where the unavoidable stresses and strains of living change certain personality types from reasonably safe drivers into "accident-prone" drivers. But she identified psychological twists likely to be involved.

"An individual who is likely to worry or grieve predisposes himself to inattentiveness," she said. "An individual who is quick to anger is likely to lose the cautiousness that helps prevent accidents. Fatigue causes slowing of the reaction time, so that the chronically fatigued individual is more subject to accidents than others.

I-J Soon To Be Getting Photos From Europe

The Independent-Journal soon will receive newspictures directly from Europe.

The Independent-Journal is on the Associated Press wirephoto network and will receive transmissions from Europe about mid-January after hookup of an Associated Press cablephoto circuit under the Atlantic.

Wes Gallagher, AP general manager, announced in New York that the high fidelity transmission of newspictures between the U. S. and Europe will be brought about by an exclusive circuit.

The two-way photo channel is the first transoceanic cable circuit ever leased by a news service for picture transmission.

It will be available 24 hours a day and capable of simultaneous transmissions to and from Europe, with all the flexibility inherent in an exclusive facility of this kind, Gallagher said.

He said that, in effect, the circuit will link the two AP Wirephoto networks of Europe and North America, networks that serve hundreds of newspapers and television stations.

The circuit is being leased from Press Wireless, Inc. The transatlantic segment is in the telephone cable between Montreal and London. Tests will begin early in January, and D. K. Deneuf, Press Wireless president, said the circuit probably will be ready for regular AP operations in mid-January.

Picture traffic between the United States and Europe over past years has been mainly by radio.

Gallagher said the new Atlantic circuit will give wirephoto and cablephoto connections extending from Rome to California, an airline distance of about 6,500 miles.

John Lloyd, AP general executive for Europe, said the facility will bring current picture operations in the following countries into direct transatlantic contact with the United States: Finland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Italy, France and Great Britain.

Over 500 Look At New Bank

More than 500 persons got a look at the new Montecito Center Branch of the Bank of America in an open house Thursday night, bank manager DeWitt Mason said today.

There was a "run" on the few potted plants that the bank was giving to visitors.

"We had 500 of them and they were all gone before the evening was over," Mason said.

The bank will open for business Wednesday. Hours will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. every weekday except Friday when the bank will stay open until 6 p.m. There will be a staff of nine, Mason said.

Application Filed For New Bank

Application has been filed by five Marin County residents for a national charter to open an independent bank in Tiburon, it was learned today.

Those signing the application were Charles Tijerina of Belvedere, land owner and developer with office in Tiburon; Mrs. James L. Heynemann of Belvedere; Fred Mantegani, Tiburon merchant; Paul R. Leahy of San Rafael, vice president and manager of Title Insurance and Trust Co., and Lawrence A. Mayer of Kentfield, Mill Valley merchant.

Signers said that at this time there are no officers, the proposed institution has no name as yet, and no information on proposed capitalization is available at this time.

The application was made to the San Francisco office of the federal comptroller of the currency.

If approved, this would be the first independently owned bank on the Tiburon Peninsula. A branch of Crocker-Anglo National Bank is on the Boardwalk in Belvedere.

If the charter is approved, it is understood to be the intention to open in the old bank building at the end of Tiburon's Main Street. Now unoccupied, this building was originally the home of a branch of the Bank of Sausalito in 1922, and later of the American Trust Co., now merged with Wells-Fargo Bank.

Leadership Awards Due From Elks

Announcement of Elks Club leadership awards to a boy and a girl high school student in Marin County will be made next Feb. 29, according to John Clahan, San Rafael Elks Lodge award chairman.

Two awards will be made to Marin County youngsters regardless of the outcome of the national judging, Clahan said. But if a local student should turn out to be a national winner, an additional award would be made in Marin County.

Awards will be based on a combination of leadership ability, interest in citizenship, and record in school, church and community activities, said Clahan.

Marin Pollution Inspector Named

Paul Brand, inspector for the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, has been assigned fulltime as inspector for Marin County.

He has been with the district since July. He has set up an office in the county health department's sanitation division at the Civic Center.

Brand will observe industrial, commercial and institutional operations subject to district regulations. He will check also on any smog complaints in the county.

Brand is a resident of San Anselmo and is public information chairman of the Marin Cancer Society.

Human Element Called Cause Of Accidents On Highways

By DELOS SMITH

NEW YORK (UPI) — On the eve of another protracted holiday weekend psychological scientists wished everyone could be made to realize "the human element" is responsible for at least 80 per cent of the usual slaughter by accidents on the highways and elsewhere.

That's highly contrary to the view of non-scientific people who like to think the elements of chance and luck are responsible for much of it. This makes the scientific wish a loving Christmas wish for suffering mankind. "The human element" can be controlled by human beings. The others can't be.

Psychological scientists consider their case to be one of facts gathered in years of scientific study of accidents and the people who have them. Dr. Bernice C. Sachs, an authority on psychosomatics — the influence of mind on body responses—summed up the case in a recent lecture.

Most people responsible for accidents are of similar personality type, she said. They are inclined to be "inattentive, hurried, worried and subject to mental tensions."

Beneath this surface are "deep-lying mental attitudes, including fear, depressions, constant grudges, resentment toward bosses, domestic troubles, chronic alcoholism.

"They are sometimes exhilerated and unduly emotional. They may have an inferiority complex or an 'it can't happen to me' complex. All these, as well as mental fatigue, expose them to undue hazards."

Two things are necessary to operate a complex machine, say an automobile, safely. One are good reflexes and they are part of the body's automatic capabilities —the others are emotions and attitudes which have to be sound, too.

In the view of psychosomatic science, the so-called "accident-prone" people are "aggressive, impulsive, and indifferent."

"They become preoccupied while driving — preoccupied with problems of health, home, work and money and they may be disturbed by frustration and failure," she continued. "As a result they are less alert to environmental hazards and less able to utilize effectively the knowledge, judgment and skills they have previously utilized for safety."

Scientifically it is impossible to consider accidents to be "fortuitous events and the inevitable price to be paid for technological advancement." Scientifically accidents are preventable "and causes that were heretofore regarded as being beyond the control of the individual are now seen in many cases to be intimately related to his psycho-physiological (mind-body) make-up."

"We know, for example, that people can behave safely in an unsafe environment, such as a puddler in a steel mill, and unsafely in a relatively safe environment, such as a housewife in the kitchen."

Doctor Sachs acknowledged there is controversy in science as to the precise point where the unavoidable stresses and strains of living change certain personality types from reasonably safe drivers into "accident-prone" drivers. But she identified psychological twists likely to be involved.

"An individual who is likely to worry or grieve predisposes himself to inattentiveness," she said. "An individual who is quick to anger is likely to lose the cautiousness that helps prevent accidents. Fatigue causes slowing of the reaction time, so that the chronically fatigued individual is more subject to accidents than others.

I-J Soon To Be Getting Photos From Europe

The Independent-Journal soon will receive newspictures directly from Europe.

The Independent-Journal is on the Associated Press wirephoto network and will receive transmissions from Europe about mid-January after hookup of an Associated Press cablephoto circuit under the Atlantic.

Wes Gallagher, AP general manager, announced in New York that the high fidelity transmission of newspictures between the U. S. and Europe will be brought about by an exclusive circuit.

The two-way photo channel is the first transoceanic cable circuit ever leased by a news service for picture transmission.

It will be available 24 hours a day and capable of simultaneous transmissions to and from Europe, with all the flexibility inherent in an exclusive facility of this kind, Gallagher said.

He said that, in effect, the circuit will link the two AP Wirephoto networks of Europe and North America, networks that serve hundreds of newspapers and television stations.

The circuit is being leased from Press Wireless, Inc. The transatlantic segment is in the telephone cable between Montreal and London. Tests will begin early in January, and D. K. Deneuf, Press Wireless president, said the circuit probably will be ready for regular AP operations in mid-January.

Picture traffic between the United States and Europe over past years has been mainly by radio.

Gallagher said the new Atlantic circuit will give wirephoto and cablephoto connections extending from Rome to California, an airline distance of about 6,500 miles.

John Lloyd, AP general executive for Europe, said the facility will bring current picture operations in the following countries into direct transatlantic contact with the United States: Finland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Italy, France and Great Britain.

Over 500 Look At New Bank

More than 500 persons got a look at the new Montecito Center Branch of the Bank of America in an open house Thursday night, bank manager DeWitt Mason said today.

There was a "run" on the few potted plants that the bank was giving to visitors.

"We had 500 of them and they were all gone before the evening was over," Mason said.

The bank will open for business Wednesday. Hours will be from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. every weekday except Friday when the bank will stay open until 6 p.m. There will be a staff of nine, Mason said.

Q. Can you name the textbook that's completely rewritten every day?

A. There is one, you know. It's your daily newspaper. When you stop to think, isn't your newspaper the most up-to-date textbook on a great many school subjects?

It's unsurpassed in coverage of current political, social or economic events. It's filled with reports of latest discoveries in biology, chemistry and all sciences. It also fills in background on foreign lands for foreign-language study. It prints articles on local history... food, family, furnishings news of use in homemaking courses... texts of great speeches... examples of English composition and good grammar.

No wonder more and more teachers are using newspapers in classrooms to enrich basic-course material. In fact, newspapers have become such a widespread teaching tool that an extensive program of teachers' workshops has been created. At these sessions—held at various colleges throughout the country—teachers learn the most effective techniques for using newspapers in class to stimulate student interest. Sponsored jointly by educators and American Newspaper Publishers Association, these workshops help teachers help students become active, well-informed citizens. As a textbook for youth or the main source of information for all Americans, our country's newspapers never stop serving.

Science Toys Are Many And Varied

This is a where-could-we-possibly-go-from-here-year in toys.

But we've heard that before. American inventiveness in toyland seems to move as fast as the ever-changing world.

WE ARE taking space age toys for granted and now kids can even build their own computers. The most ambitious addition to the scientific toy roster is a kit for constructing a digital computer.

Scientists have produced a variety of kits designed to kindle the interest of young children. J. Darrell Barnard, chairman of the department of science and mathematics education at New York University, explains that insofar as new science kits go " . . . all fields of science are represented. Sets range in difficulty from the relatively simple to the reasonably sophisticated."

There is no magic formula that an educator of manufacturer can pass along for determining what science set would be suitable for your child, he says. You determine that by sizing up your own child's science interests, and then finding a science set to match them.

THE ULTIMATE for junior star gazers is a telescope with a working camera attached. Playroom microscopes have achieved professional status, with audience viewers and micro projectors. Junior heart specialists are aided by a kit which involves building an operating replacement of the human heart.

One electronics toy is a transistorized listening device that operates on the same basis as the antennae tracking astronauts in orbit. And on an electronic rifle range a rifle shoots bullets of light at a moving bullseye in the target. The bullseye lights up and rings a bell when hit. The target operates on flashlight battery and the rifle on a transistor battery.

Pick Luggage For Personality Of The Recipient

If you plan to give luggage this Christmas, remember that your choice should not only suit the recipient's needs but also his or her personality.

Luggage should be as personal as the clothes the carrier wears.

There are countless styles and types of leather bags on the market today simplifying gift selections.

The man or woman who travels by air frequently, often on one and two day trips—will appreciate a compact leather bag that can be carried on to the plane and then tucked underneath the seat.

Give Sportswear

If you've got a hard-to-please fellow on your gift list, make a note right now that he'll probably go for the casual, relaxed look of new sportswear.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Best Present You Can Give Infant Is To Continue Business As Usual

VAN DELLEN

Most babies are more interested in milk and sleep than in Christmas trees. They are too young to appreciate or get excited over their first yuletide. The best present you can give them is to continue business as usual.

Serve their meals on time and respect that imaginary sign, "quiet—baby sleeping." There is no har min letting Junior look at the bright lights and showing him off during wakeful periods. But put him back in the crib when there are signs of restlessness or irritability. He'll sleep better and so will the parents.

OLDER BABIES are likely to be enamored of the Christmas tree, especially if they can crawl or walk. This is the age of curiosity and the period when an infant reaches for any attractive object. He wants to taste it, drop it, and go after something else.

It is unfair to the toddler or creeper to have so much glitter that cannot be touched. Put the tree on a table to avoid frustration and a barrage of no-no-nos. Lift him up now and then and let him touch the tree. Select a branch having a decoration that can be pulled off.

A TABLE TREE may be inadequate when there are older children in the household. It is here that a play pen is a godsend; set it up in the living room so the baby can join the fun.

Several Christmas holiday hazards ought to be mentioned to avert a tragedy at this time of gayety. Bubbling lights contain a small amount of methylene chloride. Swallowing the contents of one light is not likely to be lethal but may produce drowsiness or excitement. Large amounts are definitely poisonous. Icicle decorations and angel hair may lead to severe irritation when swallowed. Mistletoe and holly berries contain a toxin; keep them away from the small fry.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

HEART CHANGES

A. F. N. writes: Will an electrocardiogram show a heart murmur?

REPLY

No. The electrocardiograph is a machine that detects the electrical waves that stimulate the auricles and centricles to contract. These waves follow definite pathways and produce a typical pattern on the electrocardiogram. Changes in the heart muscle are easily detected because the waves must detour around the area. Alterations in rhythm also are noted and it is here that the machine is at its best. Murmurs do not show up but these abnormal heart sounds can be detected via a stethoscope.

RARE TRENCH MOUTH

F. H. writes: What causes trench mouth? What are the symptoms? Is there a cure?

REPLY

This contagious condition is caused by Vincent's spirochetes and fusiform bacilli. It is rarely seen nowadays but in the past occurred chiefly in adults under conditions associated with malnutrition and overcrowding. Ragged ulcers develop on the gums, lips, and inner side of the cheeks. The infection responds quickly to penicillin.

FOOD UTILIZATION

C. P. writes: What is a metabolic disease?

REPLY

Metabolism refers to the changes occurring in the body through the utilization of the foods and fluids taken. Alterations in this natural process constitute diseases of metabolism. Among the most widely known metabolic diseases are gout, diabetes, and obesity.

PERFORATED APPENDIX

Mrs. K. T. writes: What are the symptoms to look for to guard against bursting of the appendix?

REPLY

The chief sign is abdoinal pain, especially in the lower right side.

This Was No Stag Party; Just Stag

WICHITA (AP)—A newspaper carrier, Stanley W. Brown, 17, and his dog, Midnight, were startled by a crash and tinkling glass as they made their rounds early one morning.

Brown stared at the broken window of the office of Charles F. Curry & Co., and could see a young stag deer bounding around inside, jumping upon and over desks and chairs.

Stanley ran to call police. Midnight ran home.

Several attempts to capture the deer were unsuccessful. Finally it leaped out the window and hasn't been seen since.

Booked at the Marin County jail on charges of being drunk and contributing to the delinquency of minors were Ramona Cecelia Edsberg, 46, of 36 Merwin Avenue, Fairfax, and Clarence Joseph Kohler, 47, of San Francisco.

Police said two girls were daughters of Mrs. Edsberg and two were daughters of Kohler. Their ages ranged from 12 to 16.

The girls told Dooley they had been sitting in the car since 11 p.m. They were placed with relatives.

A CHRISTMAS present for Marinites from the C. Fredrick Faude Galleries of 585 Bridgeway, Sausalito, is this spectacular holiday season window display of stained and leaded glass. A display which attracted widespread attention and acclaim last year has been enlarged this year. The staining and leading of glass, says gallery owner C. Fredrick Faude of San Anselmo, is an art that is fast becoming a lost one. This fine work was turned out in Europe. (Independent-Journal photo by Jim Kean)

A STAR FOR CHRISTMAS

Toss out the tinsel and glitter,
the baubles and bundles of fluff,
the ribbons, the gift-wrap and litter,
of that, I have had quite enough!

Leave me the fragrance of Christmas, aroma of fir and of pine,
postmarks from Nome to the Isthmus,
and a star for my Bethlehem shrine.

Gifts Go Under The Agapanthus Tree

The six-foot Christmas tree in the Robert J. Smith home is one of Marin's most unusual. It is also an especially attractive tree.

The tree was made—not grown—by Mrs. Smith.

Her materials: A chicken wire frame, some dried Lily of the Nile or Agapanthus, and some acorns.

The Smiths have been using the same basic tree for four years now, each Christmas spraying it a different color. This year it is green. And the tree has been decorated with blinking lights.

While the frame is saved from year to year, Mrs. Smith goes out each year to collect Agapanthus and acorns.

"It was difficult finding the materials at first," she says. "But now I have my sources pretty well pinpointed."

"And," she smiles, "certain generous neighbors are getting accustomed to having me ring their doorbell each year and ask for some of their Agapanthus."

Not only does Mrs. Smith fashion the family tree in this manner, but she also makes numerous smaller trees as table decorations in the same manner.

"I have 20 of them out in the garage right now still waiting for delivery," she says.

The Smiths reside at 198 Tulane Drive in Larkspur and have four children, the youngest 5-year-old Rebecca. Since her second year, little Rebecca has become accustomed to opening her gifts under the Agapanthus tree.

It's understandable if the pines, cedars and spruces which she sees on the Christmas tree sales lots look just a little strange to her young eyes.

THIS IS THE TREE 5-year-old Rebecca Smith thinks of when you talk about Christmas trees. Made by her mother, Mrs. Robert J. Smith of Larkspur, of a chicken wire frame, Agapanthus, acorns, etc., it has served the Smiths now for four holiday seasons. It is sprayed a different color each year. (Independent-Journal photos)

MRS. SMITH ALSO uses Agapanthus to make smaller trees as Christmas table decorations, giving many of them to friends. Here little Rebecca admires some of her mother's handiwork.

Instruction to Land Buyers

First see the land which thou intend'st to buy
Within the sellers title clearly lye,

And that no woman to it doth lay claime
By Dowry, Joynture, or some other name,

That may encumber, know if bond or fee
The Tenure stand, and that for each feoffee

It be released, that th' sellers be soe old.
That he may lawful sell, thou lawful hold.

Have special care that it not mortgaged lye,
Nor be entailed upon posterity.

Then if it stand in statute bound or noe,
Be well advised what quitt rent out must goe,

What custome service hath been done of old
By those who formerly the same did hold.

And if a wedded woman put to sale
Deal not with her unless she bring her male,

For she doth under covert barren goe,
Although sometimes some traffique soe we know.

Thy bargain made and all this be done,
Have special care to make thy charter run

To thee, thy heirs, executors, assigns,
For that beyond thy life securely binds,

These things foreknown and done, you may prevent
Those things rash buyers many times repent,

And yet when you have done all you can,
If youle be sure, deal with an honest man.

A Christmas Message For Our Readers

By REV. DONALD REGISTER

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine traditionally, in its pre-Christmas issue, presents a Christmas message to its readers from a Marin clergyman. This year's message is from Rev. Donald Register, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Marin City.)

During recent weeks we have been buying Christmas gifts for friends and our families, as we attempt to win their favor or express our appreciation for their kind deeds.

Some of us will be giving gifts because we know that we will be receiving presents from friends, and we do not want to be embarassed because we didn't remember one of our donors.

Obviously, the above does not express the only reasons why we give gifts. We also like to think of the pleasure the receivers will have when they open our gifts and know that they were sent with all of our affection and love.

HAVE YOU ever stopped to think about the motive behind God's gift to us in Jesus Christ?

His motive is love, which is quite different from some of our motives. He loved the world so that He gave it the greatest gift of all time. That gift which He gave is none other than Himself, as He came to us in the Baby Jesus born in Bethlehem of Judea, whose birth was announced by the angels and whose message was proclaimed by the men whose lives He touched.

In His creation, God made man to worship and glorify Him. Man rebelled against his Creator, thus breaking the established relationship.

In his rebellion, man sought to be independent of God. Because God loved man, he sought to mend this broken relationship, for it was obvious that outside of it, man was destroying himself.

Here he was suffering from his own evils and groping in darkness, clinging to values which turned out to be unreal and insignificant.

God sought to mend this broken relationship in a manner whereby man could know that he was experiencing the love of God, thus He came into the world in the man, Jesus, to live and die for our sins.

Through Jesus, the relationship between God and man was restored; in Him, the Devine and the human met, and bridged the chasm created by man's attempt to live independently of God.

THIS GIFT is motivated by the love of a Father for His children, rather than by a sense of duty or obligation. How, then, are we expected to respond to this action by God?

The answer is to be found in the manner in which God approached us. He did not give us material wealth or good health to lure us into seeing how good He is and how much He loves us, thus buying our respect and worship.

Instead, He gave us all that He had—Himself.

This is the beauty of this gift to the world: He gave us Himself — not a substitute, not a synthetic, but His Very Own Self.

Thus our response to Him is the giving of ourselves to Him. In doing so, we seek to know and do His will in our lives.

We are not to bring gifts of gold, silver, frankincense or myrrh to Him. We are to bring only ourselves. When we do this, our lives will take on depth rather than shallowness, values rather than worthlessness, meaning and purpose rather than emptiness and false goals.

There is a certain joy which we exhibit during this time of the year. We have only kind words for all, and express love and compassion for our families and our neighbors. Unfortunately, this joy is allowed to fade with the passing of the season.

This is the very thing that will change the world, if it is grounded in our response to God for His wonderful gift. Why?

BECAUSE IT is motivated by love for God which we show in our worship of Him, and by our seeking to serve our fellow man in this same joy. This kind of joy and love can penetrate all of the barriers which we construct around us, be they walls as in Berlin, or imaginary curtains as in China and Russia.

As the Christmas season is now upon us, let us be mindful of this need of man which caused God to come to us as a man.

Remember also His love for us which motivated his coming. Never forget that we are not expected to respond to this love in any other way except in the giving of ourselves to God as He so unselfishly gave Himself to us.

"Thanks be to God for His inexpressable gift."

CHRISTMAS COMES TO THE JUVENILE HALL

There's no shortage of Christmas spirit at the Marin Juvenile Detention Hall.

The boys and girls contribute a lot of the holiday atmosphere themselves. And individuals, organizations and business firms in the county lend their support.

The young residents of the hall put their artistic talents to work each Christmas time in decorating the windows of the home in Lucas Valley with holiday scenes. The hall provides the juveniles with brushes and tempera water colors, and assigns them a window.

"AND," SAYS Dave Fogel, superintendent of the hall, "some of them do an amazingly good—even beautiful—job."

Pride in accomplishment is not, however, limited to the more artistically talented.

"Everyone who wants to paint, regardless of age or ability, is allowed to get into the act," says Fogel. "And the ones whose work might not be quite as polished are, nevertheless, just as proud of their handiwork."

The painting of the windows of the hall is a tradition not only at Christmas time, but for other holidays as well.

Often several days, sometimes an entire week, are devoted to a single "masterpiece" by a youthful artist.

The scenes are an important part of the hall's holiday decor at Christmas time.

There are also Christmas trees and yule decorations provided by interested outside organizations.

Nor are the boys and girls at the hall forgotten in the gift department. Each year each of the young residents makes out a request list for three presents—one a recreation item, one an article of clothing, the third a toiletry article. The purchases are then made from funds contributed by organizations and individuals in the Marin community.

THE TASK of matching available monies to requests falls upon the young shoulders of the "unit council" elected from among the boys and girls in the home.

Sometimes, if the request list is long and the available funds limited, the unit council members may have to do a bit of "pinching" as to the quality of the year's purchases.

And it has not been unknown for the council members to eliminate one or more of their own requests so that the other boys and girls can receive all of the gifts for which they have asked.

The Juvenile Hall Auxiliary members do the shopping. But they are accompanied by representatives of the boys and girls in the home so that their purchases will be certain to be ones pleasing to the younger generation.

MORE THAN half the boys and girls in the juvenile hall will be permitted to go home to celebrate Christmas with their families. But for some this is not possible.

"For these young people, we try to make Christmas at the hall as home-like as humanly possible," Fogel says.

One big step toward accomplishing this end is to invite a Marin family to spend their Christmas Eve each year in the hall with the young residents.

"This having a family in their midst give the boys and girls here the feeling of belonging that is so important at Christmas time," Fogel explains.

A minister is present to deliver a Christmas Eve message.

And there is singing around the trees and the opening of presents—including gifts sent by relatives and friends as well as the purchases made by the hall's auxiliary.

THE RECIPIENTS are permitted to keep all "appropriate" gifts at the hall. Presents, which for various reasons cannot be kept at the hall, are sent to their homes.

And on Christmas Day, of course, there is the traditional feast with all the dishes and treats that have become linked with the great yule holiday.

"At Christmas time," Superintendent Fogel says, "all that is good seems to come out in people. And the juvenile hall is no exception. Antagonisms and fears disappear. And like boys and girls everywhere, the young people are at their very best."

AND NOW THE window scene is nearly completed. Sometimes days are spent on such artwork. And the result is a gay addition to the Christmas atmosphere at the juvenile hall.

Two Christmases For Them

Aldersly Residents Blend American, Danish Customs

By DON KEOWN

Mrs. Agnes Larsen has known — and loved — Christmas as it is observed in two lands: In her native Denmark, which she left 48 years ago, and in her adopted land of the United States.

Frequent trips back to Denmark since her departure from that country have seen her there often at Christmas time.

And, she says, "there is nothing quite so wonderful as Christmas time—or Jul—in Denmark."

FORTUNATELY for Mrs. Larsen, even though thousands of miles will separate her this Christmas from the land of Hans Christian Andersen, she will enjoy many of the Danish traditions and customs. For at Aldersly Danish Home, where she has resided in San Rafael for the past 10 years, Danish and American Christmas customs are blended into a colorful three-day observance.

But, first let's listen to Mrs. Larsen as she tells of some of the Danish holiday activities which she remembers from her girlhood in the small town of Koge and from her more recent trips back home to visit relatives and friends:

"The preparations start early in December . . . around Dec. 1. And generally speaking, Christmas is less commercialized there.

"The people, especially in the small towns, make most of their gifts—knitting sweaters, etc. And most of the ornaments for the tree and home are also made. This serves to keep the children busy during those exciting pre-Christmas weeks.

"Christmas is a time of the family—a time to come home.

"THE MEETING of the ships from America bringing relatives back for Christmas is a big thing. The relations gather on the dock to meet them. There is Christmas music playing. And big welcoming signs carry the family names of those awaiting loved ones on board.

"Now many of these Danish-Americans make the trip by plane. But the airplane can never completely replace the ship for Christmas travel back to Denmark. It just isn't as romantic.

"In Denmark the major celebration occurs on Christmas Eve. The tree is not put up until the day before. Stores close around 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and about 4 p.m. everyone goes to church. Then they return home for the traditional dinner.

"On the farm or in the small town, the menu will almost certainly include pork roast with Danish sausages and red cabbage and, for dessert — the traditional rice boiled in cream, topped with cinnamon and sugar and containing one almond. Whoever gets the almond also gets a special gift.

"And a special kind of beverage, a sort of Christmas ale, is served with the meal.

"In the cities, the main dish may be goose or duck stuffed with apples and prunes. But the boiled rice with the almond will be served there, too.

"IT IS ON Christmas Eve that the Danish Santa—we call him Yulemand — visits the homes and gives out the gifts. And it is on Christmas Eve the children first see the tree which has been decorated the night before.

"The streets in Denmark are decorated in much the same manner as American streets. But in Copenhagen, the main street is blocked off except to foot traffic. And what you have is a mall of electrically-lighted pines.

"But even the small towns and villages have their street decorations.

"Part of the Christmas season is the Advent observance, since the Danes are largely Lutherans. This takes place during the last four weeks of the year. Wreaths containing four lights are used to mark the occasion, with the first light being turned on the first Sunday of Advent and then an additional light being illuminated for each Sunday that follows until the wreath is completely lighted.

"And cookie baking, of course, is always a big thing in Denmark during the Christmas season. A must is the klejner, a kind of Danish doughnut cooked in deep fat. And there are the brown syrup cookies. And many other different kinds of cookies.

"DURING THE holiday season you visit each other's homes and sample each other's cookies. There is an awful lot of nibbling in Danish homes in December.

"And something the Danes have that Americans do not have is Small Christmas Eve on Dec. 23. It is then that the aebleskiver, baked in a special pan, is eaten.

"In theory, all the Christmas preparations are through on Dec. 23, so that there need be no last-minute rush and all can thoroughly enjoy the holiday.

"There are many other Danish traditions. In the rural areas, the families still go out and cut their Christmas trees. Fancy cloths are embroidered to be placed under the trees to catch the drippings from the lighted candles which are still used frequently as decorations.

"And it is the custom to give business acquaintances and friends live flower decorations. Growing these hothouse flowers is a thriving business.

"And table decorations are a must."

At the Aldersly Home, Mrs. Larsen, who serves as chairman of the residents' committee, and her fellow senior citizens who reside there, are smart enough to enjoy not only the Danish celebration of Dec. 23 and 24, but also the American Christmas of Dec. 25.

Thanks to the response from so many of you the Nativity Scene is in place as it always has been. May it add a little warmth and friendliness to our hurried lives.

Many individuals responded to the call for help to make figures, and for painting, etc. Also many organizations responded. A Big, Big Thanks to all of you. Especially to Mr. Frank Volta who generously offered his time and the figures that he had already made.

Donations toward the purchase of a new Christmas scene for future years are coming in. We need more so that the new scene can be a beautiful one. Send in your dollars to the Chamber of Commerce or drop them off to us.

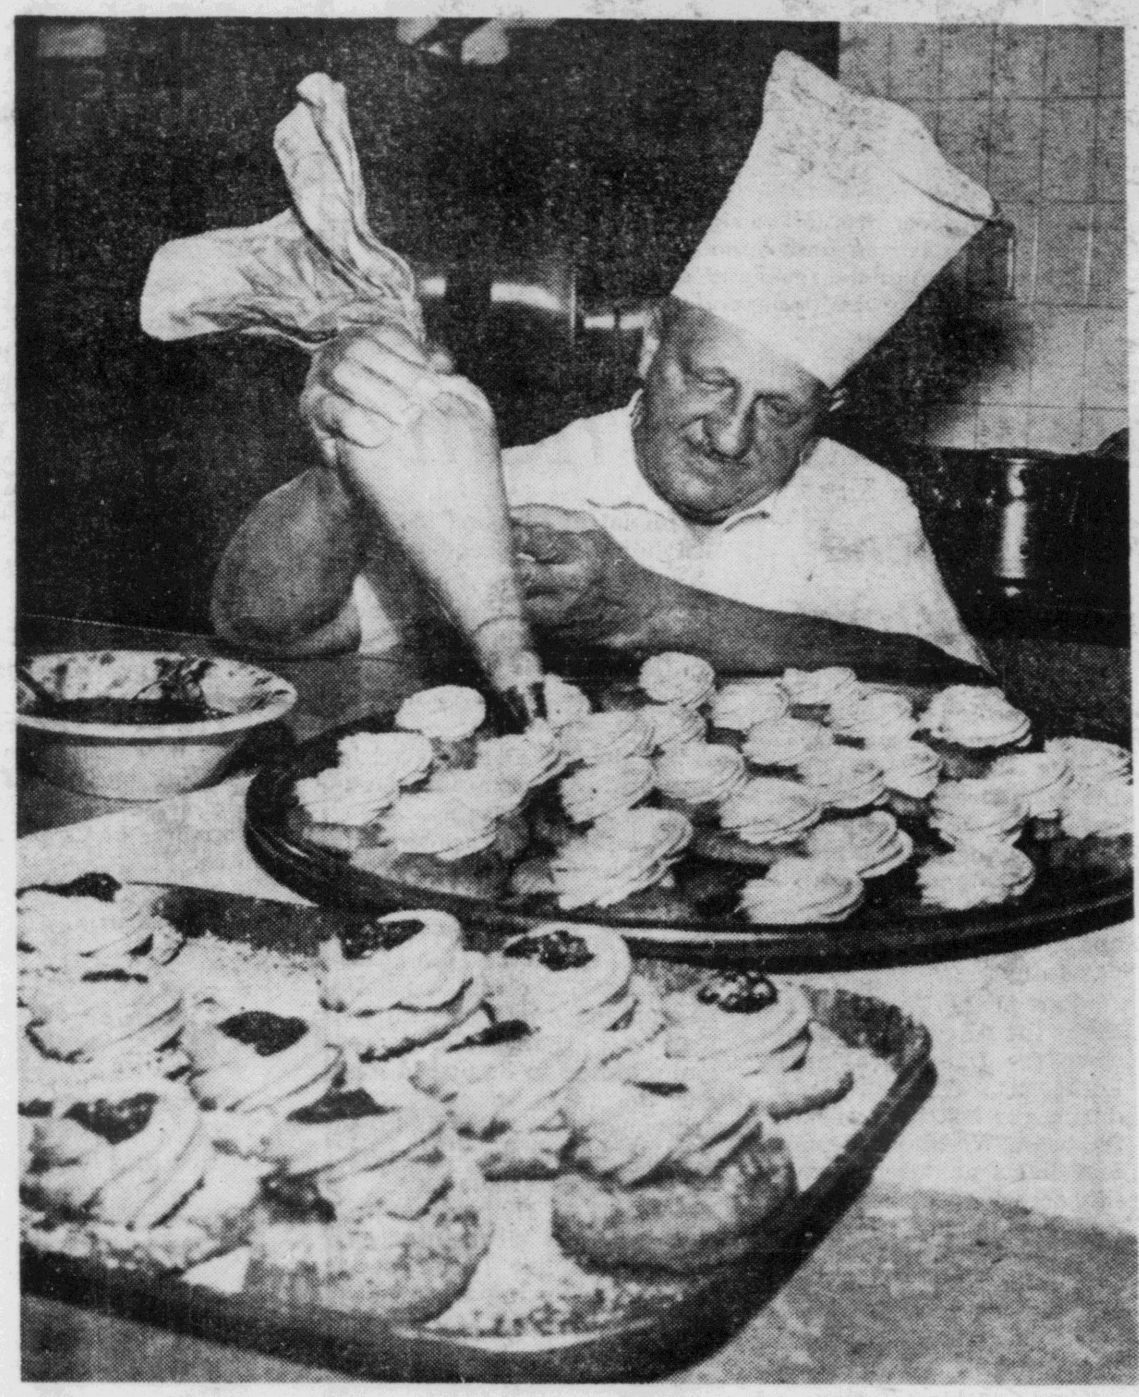
LIKE THE OTHER residents of the Aldersly Home, Mrs. Marie Hansen has not forgotten the Christmas traditions of her native Denmark. At left, she puts the finishing touches to her table decorations. At center, she is preparing the traditional aebleskiver. And at right, she prepares to taste some of that delicacy herself. (Independent-Journal photos)



DANISH PASTRY not only tastes good—it looks good, too. Here chef Maurice Guridi of the Aldersly Danish Home puts the finishing touches with a flair on some holiday tidbits to be eaten by the residents and their guests.

BEING REMEMBERED by loved ones is especially important at Christmas time for the elderly. And this is particularly true of Danes, for whom the holidays are a great "family time." Here young kin Jannet Jorgensen, 9, of San Mateo brings her annual Christmas tree and gift to Mrs. Julia Daniel at the Aldersly Home.

dents will enjoy the traditional aebleskiver tomorrow night—Little Christmas.

Then on Monday morning they will arise for a heavy breakfast of sausages, bacon, cookies, fruit, cereal, juice and coffee—very similar to the menu their Danish relatives will be eating across the Atlantic.

This, with a snack of coffee and cookies (for just as in Copenhagen, the Danish-Americans must sample each other's baking), will tide them over until about 4:30—time for the traditional Jul feast.

Dressed in their Sunday the Aldersly residents who have not gone to the homes of relatives for the holidays will move in a procession into the community dining room. Many will have with them relatives who are spending the day as their guests.

The living room will be decorated with a small Christmas tree and in the simple but traditional Danish manner which features red and white. The usual white tablecloths will be decorated with colorful Christmas decor, complete with candlelight. Soft traditional Christmas music will add to the spirit.

THE MENU will include roast pork and Danish sausages, crisp-browned pork rind, red cabbage (sour and sweet, and hot), risengrod med mandel (the boiled rice), sugar-browned Irish potatoes, pickled beets, sweet pickles, olives, applesauce, red wine, coffee and the traditional Danish cookies such as klejner, brown cookies and the vanilla pretzel.

After dinner, the celebration will move into the social hall where Danish Christmas hymns will be sung. For safety reasons the Danish practice of joining hands and forming a circle around the tree must be omitted. But there will be talks of other Christmases spent on both sides of the Atlantic. And fruit, cookies and wine until time for bed, for another strenuous day lies ahead.

On Tuesday, breakfast at 8:30 will consist of bacon and eggs, toast, cereal, juice, milk, coffee and the Danish Julkringle—a pastry.

There will be partying and coffee drinking throughout the afternoon.

And finally, in the evening, the traditional American Christmas dinner with turkey and trimmings, wine, dessert and coffee.

IF EXHAUSTION has not yet set in, more private get-togethers and good conversation with the inevitable cookies and coffee will follow.

Yes, at Aldersly Mrs. Larsen and her friends have hit upon a way of doubling the enjoyment of that already greatest of holidays by holding two Christmas observances — one Danish, one American. And both wonderful.

1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
a little sugar
a little salt
vanilla and cardamom

Mix flour and baking powder and soda thoroughly, then mix with buttermilk and egg yokes. Whip egg whites until stiff and add. Flavor with sugar, salt, vanilla and cardamon.

Bake in special pan. Heat pan. Melt mixture of one-half shortening, one-half margarine plus a little butter. Pour a little in each Aebleskiver hole, then fill hole about half full with batter. Turn when brown on one side. (A knitting pin is excellent for turning.)

Serve hot, decorated with powdered sugar or strawberry jam. Makes about 60 pieces.

THIN SWEET PRETZELS

½ cup sugar
¾ cup butter
1 egg
1 tsp. carbonated ammonia
½ tsp. cardamom
2½ cups flour

Cream butter and sugar, add egg slightly beated, sifted flour and cardamom, and the carbonated ammonia dissolved in a little water. Work dough very gently, roll very thin and cut into strips.

Shape into pretzel, flatten with rolling pin, dip in a slightly beaten egg to which a little cream has been added. Dip in sugar and bake at 350 degrees until light brown. Keep in a tight jar.

KLEJNER

3 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ cup butter
3 or 4 cups flour
4 tbls. cream
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. vanilla or cardamom

Beat eggs and sugar, add cream and melted butter and stir in enough flour to make batter stiff enough to roll out. Cut in diamond shape. Make slit in center and pull one end through slit.

Cook in deep fat until light brown. Turn with a kitchen fork. Place on brown paper to cool. Use two pounds shortening for cooking this portion.

BROWN COOKIES

1½ cup shortening
½ cup light molasses
4 cups flour
2 beaten eggs
1 tsp. baking soda
2 tsp. cloves
2 tsp. cinnamon
2 tsp. ginger
2 cups sugar

Place the shortening (half butter, half margarine), sugar and molasses on heat. When melted, remove from fire and add rest of ingredients. Mix well. Cool and form in rolls. Cut very thin.

Place half a blanched almond on each. Bake in a 375 degree oven until crisp. When cool, keep in tightly-covered jar.

RISENGROD AND MANDEL

Rice is boiled in milk in a double boiler until tender, then served hot with a little sugar and cinnamon sprinkled over it. A large lump of butter is placed in the center into which each spoonful is dipped. At Christmastime the mandel, or almond, is placed in the rice, whole and uncooked. Whoever gets the almond in his portion gets an extra Christmas gift — usually a box of chocolate or other goodies.

Science Toys Are Many And Varied

This is a where-could-we-possibly-go-from-here-year in toys.

But we've heard that before. American inventiveness in toyland seems to move as fast as the ever-changing world.

WE ARE taking space age toys for granted and now kids can even build their own computers. The most ambitious addition to the scientific toy roster is a kit for constructing a digital computer.

Scientists have produced a variety of kits designed to kindle the interest of young children. J. Darrell Barnard, chairman of the department of science and mathematics education at New York University, explains that insofar as new science kits go " . . . all fields of science are represented. Sets range in difficulty from the relatively simple to the reasonably sophisticated."

There is no magic formula that an educator of manufacturer can pass along for determining what science set would be suitable for your child, he says. You determine that by sizing up your own child's science interests, and then finding a science set to match them.

THE ULTIMATE for junior star gazers is a telescope with a working camera attached. Playroom microscopes have achieved professional status, with audience viewers and micro projectors. Junior heart specialists are aided by a kit which involves building an operating replacement of the human heart.

One electronics toy is a transistorized listening device that operates on the same basis as the antennae tracking astronauts in orbit. And on an electronic rifle range a rifle shoots bullets of light at a moving bullseye in the target. The bullseye lights up and rings a bell when hit. The target operates on flashlight battery and the rifle on a transistor battery.

Pick Luggage For Personality Of The Recipient

If you plan to give luggage this Christmas, remember that your choice should not only suit the recipient's needs but also his or her personality.

Luggage should be as personal as the clothes the carrier wears.

There are countless styles and types of leather bags on the market today simplifying gift selections.

The man or woman who travels by air frequently, often on one and two day trips—will appreciate a compact leather bag that can be carried on to the plane and then tucked underneath the seat.

Give Sportswear

If you've got a hard-to-please fellow on your gift list, make a note right now that he'll probably go for the casual, relaxed look of new sportswear.

SHE WRAPS THOUSANDS of gift packages during the year, but for Mrs. W. P. Buchwald this past week has been her busiest. She is the gift-wrapper at Lu Dell's in San Rafael. And as the Christmas buying splurge reached its peak, she was hard-pressed to keep up with the demand for her artistic holiday creations. (Independent-Journal photo)

10,000 Gift-Wrapped Items

That's The Annual Output Of One San Rafael Store

By DON KEOWN

So you had trouble gift wrapping your Christmas presents this year?

How would you like to wrap several thousand a year?

That's what Mrs. W. P. Buchwald does.

She's the gift-wrapper at Lu Dells on San Rafael's Fourth Street. Employed the year around, she does almost all of the Lu Dells wrapping through most of the year. At the peak of the Christmas season, she receives assistance from Dell and Lu Shuttleworth, the co-owners of the store, and other Lu Dells employees.

AND IN A year, the store gift wraps more than 10,000 parcels, perhaps a quarter of that number for mailing.

Approximately 30 per cent of that volume comes at Christmas time.

There was a time, Dell Shuttleworth says, when Christmas accounted for a larger portion of sales and wrapping. But wedding gifts have gradually increased as a source of revenue at the store "until now June is nearly as big a month for us as December."

Still, it is at Christmas time that gift-wrapping goes on a 12-hours-a-day basis at the store.

What does it take to be a successful gift-wrapper?

"Well," says Dell, "it takes both natural skill and a lot of practice. When Mrs. Buchwald went to work for us, she had no previous experience at gift wrapping. But she did have a knack for that sort of thing, which made it easier to train her."

The gift-wrapper's work is simplified considerably by the use of gift boxes.

"WE PURCHASE gift boxes in 37 different sizes and shapes," says Dell. "If it wasn't for that, the job would be impossible."

As it is, the major job of the wrapper consists of ribboning and bowing. But there is the occasional gift purchase which, because of size or shape, will not fit in one of the boxes. Then it must be separately wrapped.

"And this," says Dell, "slows us down considerably."

Working at peak speed, Mrs. Buchwald can wrap about 50 gifts in an hour.

In all, Lu Dells purchases approximately $4,000 worth of boxes, wrappings and ribbons in a year. The bows, for instance, are purchased in lots of 2,500 at a time—white for weddings, pink for showers, gold for anniversaries, red for Christmas, lavender for special occasions, etc.

Tex-Sheen ribbon is purchased in two widths, three-quarters of an inch and one inch. The gift wrap paper comes in huge rolls weighing from 35 to 40 pounds.

Lu Dells, which deals in quality dinnerware, silverware and glassware, not only gift wraps packages, but also packs and mails.

Shredded white tissue is used as the packing for the interior box, with additional excelsior between the gift box and the outside shipping carton.

As indicative of the careful job of packing and addressing which Lu Dells does, Dell reports that "we have had only $10 in damage and one package lost in the mail all this year."

WHAT ARE the common mistakes of the person who undertakes the wrappings of his gifts at home?

Most problems arise, Dell says, "because the wrapper undertakes the task without the proper materials."

If twine isn't around, string may be substituted, etc.

"It's best to make certain that, before you start the job, you have on hand, first, all the necessary paraphernalia for turning out an attractive gift package, and, second, all the needed materials to make the parcel safe if it is to be sent through the mail."

Insufficient packing is a common error, he adds.

"Sometimes, in order to save postage, a mailer will conserve on packing to get a lighter package," he explains. "This can be costly by resulting in a broken article."

In a package mailed by Lu Dells, the gift item will be outweighed considerably by the box, trimmings, packing, shipping carton, etc.

The right width of paper is important, too. Too often the home wrapper tries to make a too-narrow or too-short piece of gift wrapping paper that is on hand do a job for which it was not intended.

BUT, DELL admits, the home wrapper who gathers up the proper materials and then takes the proper amount of time, can probably do a better, or at least more elaborate, job of gift-wrapping than can Lu Dells.

"I don't think they can do any better job of preparing for shipping," he says, "but they can do a fancier gift-wrapping job. It's simply a matter of time. We have too many to wrap in too few days."

And with that he again turned his attention to helping Mrs. Buchwald in the struggle to keep up with a mounting stack of last-minute Christmas gift purchases.

A STAR FOR CHRISTMAS

Toss out the tinsel and glitter,
the baubles and bundles of fluff,
the ribbons, the gift-wrap and litter,
of that, I have had quite enough!

and a star for my Bethlehem shrine.

SAN RAFAEL — RUTH MURRAY JONES

THE HOME GIFT-WRAPPER can excel the store creations, according to Dell Shuttleworth, co-owner of Lu Dell's, if he or she is properly equipped for the task ahead. "It is simply a matter of having more time," he explains. These beautifully-wrapped packages were created by the Tie-Tie Division of the Chicago Printed String Co. to show how its products can be used with imagination to lend a parcel just the right added holiday flair.

BUT MRS. BUCHWALD need offer no apologies for her work. The parcels are gay and colorful. And most important, when prepared for mailing, they are well packed and tightly tied. Gift boxes in 37 different sizes and shapes simplify her work, so that the emphasis is upon ribboning and bowing. (Independent-Journal photo)

AT THE SMITH HOME

Gifts Go Under The Agapanthus Tree

The six-foot Christmas tree in the Robert J. Smith home is one of Marin's most unusual. It is also an especially attractive tree.

The tree was made—not grown—by Mrs. Smith.

Her materials: A chicken wire frame, some dried Lily of the Nile or Agapanthus, and some acorns.

The Smiths have been using the same basic tree for four years now, each Christmas spraying it a different color. This year it is green. And the tree has been decorated with blinking lights.

While the frame is saved from year to year, Mrs. Smith goes out each year to collect Agapanthus and acorns.

"It was difficult finding the materials at first," she says. "But now I have my sources pretty well pinpointed."

"And," she smiles, "certain generous neighbors are getting accustomed to having me ring their doorbell each year and ask for some of their Agapanthus."

Not only does Mrs. Smith fashion the family tree in this manner, but she also makes numerous smaller trees as table decorations in the same manner.

"I have 20 of them out in the garage right now still waiting for delivery," she says.

The Smiths reside at 198 Tulane Drive in Larkspur and have four children, the youngest 5-year-old Rebecca. Since her second year, little Rebecca has become accustomed to opening her gifts under the Agapanthus tree.

It's understandable if the pines, cedars and spruces which she sees on the Christmas tree sales lots look just a little strange to her young eyes.

THIS IS THE TREE 5-year-old Rebecca Smith thinks of when you talk about Christmas trees. Made by her mother, Mrs. Robert J. Smith of Larkspur, of a chicken wire frame, Agapanthus, acorns, etc., it has served the Smiths now for four holiday seasons. It is sprayed a different color each year. (Independent-Journal photos)

MRS. SMITH ALSO uses Agapanthus to make smaller trees as Christmas table decorations, giving many of them to friends. Here little Rebecca admires some of her mother's handiwork.

Bring Holiday Spirit To Your Table Decor

"Deck the halls . . ." they sing at Christmas time.

And this happiest time of the year is also the time to deck your table in colorful holiday decor.

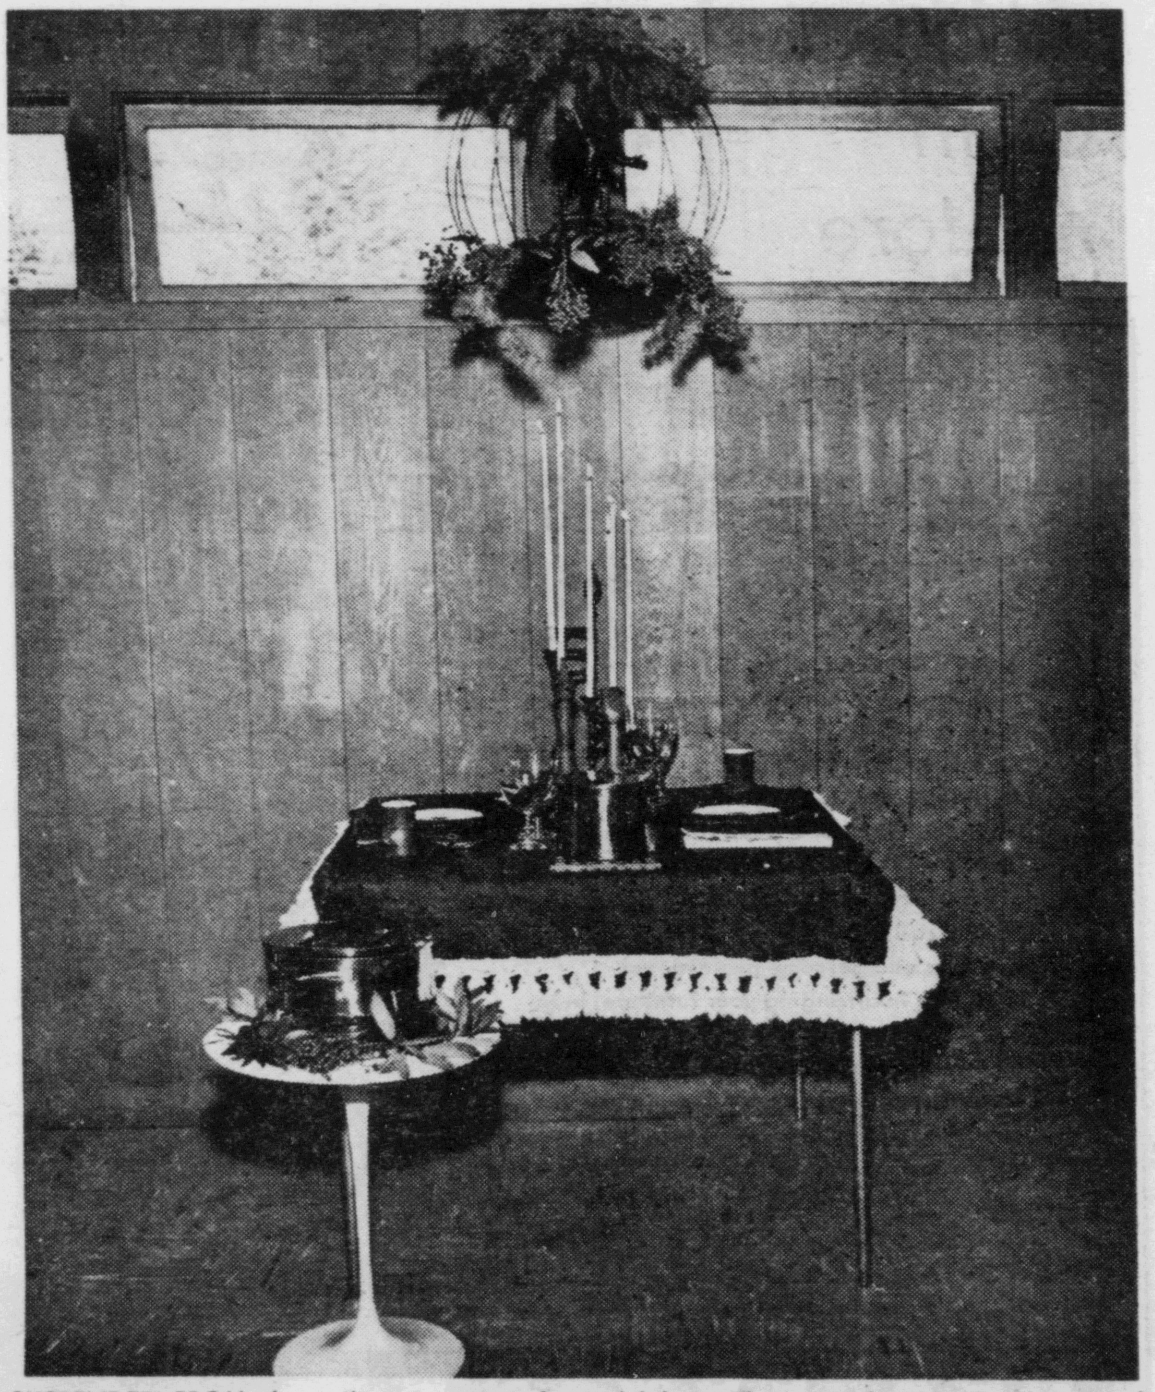
The very active Tiburon Peninsula Club earlier this month asked some of that area's merchants and individual residents to design dramatic holiday tables—for dinners, luncheons, teas, tete-a-tetes, parties.

The result was, literally, a festival of creative ideas on how to bring the holiday spirit to the dinner table.

Members and their guests reaped a bumper harvest of ideas for their own holiday decor.

And now, thanks to these photographs taken by Independent-Journal photographer Bob Hax, you, too, can benefit from the artistic ideas of these creative peninsula residents.

RED, BURNT ORANGE and gold are the colors chosen by Mrs. Thomas E. Stanton for a holiday dinner table. The cloth is half red and half burnt orange with contrasting napkins. In the center is an iron Swedish Santa Lucia crown with "jewels" of winter pears and cranberries alternating with the orange candles. A red Edam cheese enhances the color scheme and brilliant orange persimmons are served on black lacquered trays. The crystal is gold-rimmed and the oversize walnut in the foreground is gilded.



SUSPENDED FROM the ceiling is a metal globe, with a charming black angel and Christmas greens, to accent the table designed by Leonard Linn of Tiburon. Slim Swedish tapers sweep up from the candelabra. The utensils are stainless steel and the dishes brown Dansk ware. The supper is served in gleaming brass casseroles. The cloth is olive green felt with heavy white fringe.

A Christmas Message For Our Readers

By REV. DONALD REGISTER

(Editor's Note: The Independent-Journal Marin Magazine traditionally, in its pre-Christmas issue, presents a Christmas message to its readers from a Marin clergyman. This year's message is from Rev. Donald Register, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Marin City.)

During recent weeks we have been buying Christmas gifts for friends and our families, as we attempt to win their favor or express our appreciation for their kind deeds.

Some of us will be giving gifts because we know that we will be receiving presents from friends, and we do not want to be embarassed because we didn't remember one of our donors.

Obviously, the above does not express the only reasons why we give gifts. We also like to think of the pleasure the receivers will have when they open our gifts and know that they were sent with all of our affection and love.

HAVE YOU ever stopped to think about the motive behind God's gift to us in Jesus Christ?

His motive is love, which is quite different from some of our motives. He loved the world so that He gave it the greatest gift of all time. That gift which He gave is none other than Himself, as He came to us in the Baby Jesus born in Bethlehem of Judea, whose birth was announced by the angels and whose message was proclaimed by the men whose lives He touched.

In His creation, God made man to worship and glorify Him. Man rebelled against his Creator, thus breaking the established relationship.

In his rebellion, man sought to be independent of God. Because God loved man, he sought to mend this broken relationship, for it was obvious that outside of it, man was destroying himself.

Here he was suffering from his own evils and groping in darkness, clinging to values which turned out to be unreal and insignificant.

God sought to mend this broken relationship in a manner whereby man could know that he was experiencing the love of God, thus He came into the world in the man, Jesus, to live and die for our sins.

Through Jesus, the relationship between God and man was restored; in Him, the Devine and the human met, and bridged the chasm created by man's attempt to live independently of God.

THIS GIFT is motivated by the love of a Father for His children, rather than by a sense of duty or obligation. How, then, are we expected to respond to this action by God?

The answer is to be found in the manner in which God approached us. He did not give us material wealth or good health to lure us into seeing how good He is and how much He loves us, thus buying our respect and worship.

Instead, He gave us all that He had—Himself.

This is the beauty of this gift to the world: He gave us Himself — not a substitute, not a synthetic, but His Very Own Self.

Thus our response to Him is the giving of ourselves to Him. In doing so, we seek to know and do His will in our lives.

We are not to bring gifts of gold, silver, frankincense or myrrh to Him. We are to bring only ourselves. When we do this, our lives will take on depth rather than shallowness, values rather than worthlessness, meaning and purpose rather than emptiness and false goals.

There is a certain joy which we exhibit during this time of the year. We have only kind words for all, and express love and compassion for our families and our neighbors. Unfortunately, this joy is allowed to fade with the passing of the season.

This is the very thing that will change the world, if it is grounded in our response to God for His wonderful gift. Why?

BECAUSE IT is motivated by love for God which we show in our worship of Him, and by our seeking to serve our fellow man in this same joy. This kind of joy and love can penetrate all of the barriers which we construct around us, be they walls as in Berlin, or imaginary curtains as in China and Russia.

As the Christmas season is now upon us, let us be mindful of this need of man which caused God to come to us as a man.

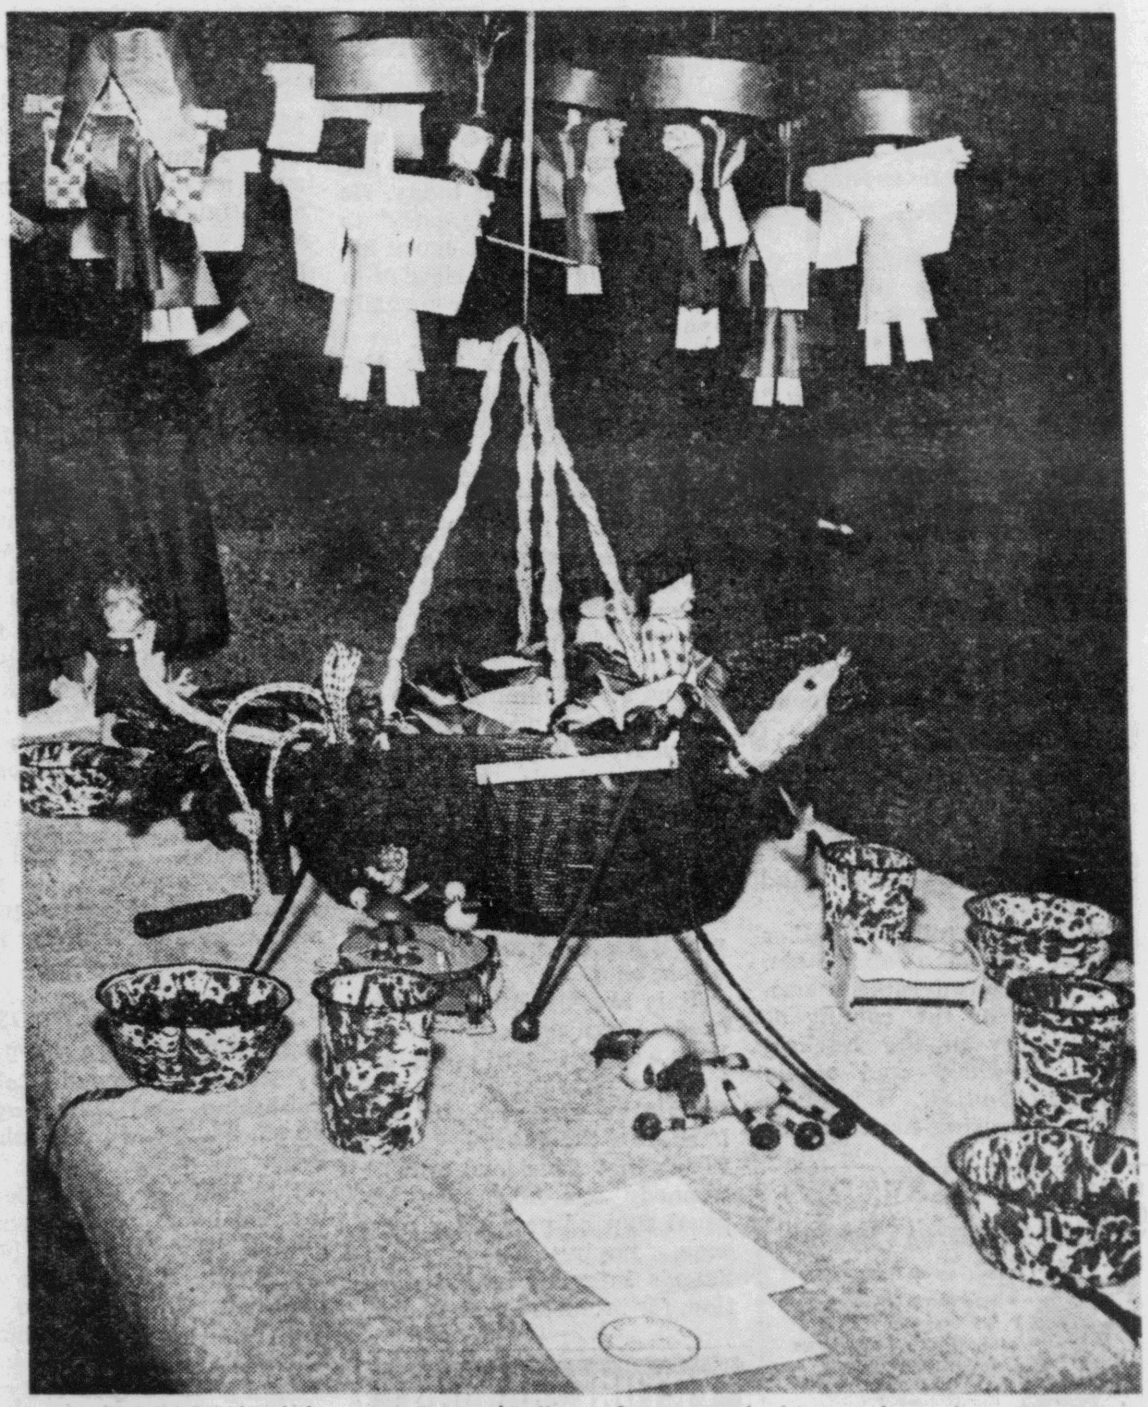
Remember also His love for us which motivated his coming. Never forget that we are not expected to respond to this love in any other way except in the giving of ourselves to God as He so unselfishly gave Himself to us.

"Thanks be to God for His inexpressable gift."

ANCE of cut glass contrasted with ystal and dishes is emphasized n's the Wild West Shop. Velvet- trimmed Victorian Christmas balls are the centerpiece. The antique silver contrasts to the olive green cloth.

EUCALYPTUS BRANCHES and hydrangea blossoms shelter a ceramic Madonna in this centerpiece, designed for a Christmas tea party by Mrs. William Davis of Belvedere. The holiday goodies will be served on the leaf-shaped wooden tea plates, and tea will be served in the Oriental cups. (Independent-Journal photos by Bob Hax)

"JOIN US FOR A CURRY SUPPER," reads the invitation, and the exotic food is served on multi-colored Heath pottery including muted blue, mustard yellow, off white, olive green and brown. An inverted casserole forms the base for the dried arrangement which swirls up around a piece of driftwood, accented by glass balls. In the center of the condiment tray is an artichoke sprayed white, which may be used as an hors d'oeuvre server.



A GILDED WICKER tree decorated with wood roses was designed by Tiburon's Tahitian Tiki shop for a Polynesian holiday buffet. A wooden tiki surveys the hand-carved Maori bowl, a heavy breadboard with a shell-handled knife and an hor d'oeuvre tray with shell-handled utensils. The fruit is served on a large sea shell and the small condiment dish is of carved mother-of-pearl with matching spoon and fork.

CHRISTMAS COMES TO THE JUVENILE HALL

There's no shortage of Christmas spirit at the Marin Juvenile Detention Hall.

The boys and girls contribute a lot of the holiday atmosphere themselves. And individuals, organizations and business firms in the county lend their support.

The young residents of the hall put their artistic talents to work each Christmas time in decorating the windows of the home in Lucas Valley with holiday scenes. The hall provides the juveniles with brushes and tempera water colors, and assigns them a window.

"AND," SAYS Dave Fogel, superintendent of the hall, "some of them do an amazingly good—even beautiful—job."

Pride in accomplishment is not, however, limited to the more artistically talented.

"Everyone who wants to paint, regardless of age or ability, is allowed to get into the act," says Fogel. "And the ones whose work might not be quite as polished are, nevertheless, just as proud of their handiwork."

The painting of the windows of the hall is a tradition not only at Christmas time, but for other holidays as well.

Often several days, sometimes an entire week, are devoted to a single "masterpiece" by a youthful artist.

The scenes are an important part of the hall's holiday decor at Christmas time.

There are also Christmas trees and yule decorations provided by interested outside organizations.

Nor are the boys and girls at the hall forgotten in the gift department. Each year each of the young residents makes out a request list for three presents—one a recreation item, one an article of clothing, the third a toiletry article. The purchases are then made from funds contributed by organizations and individuals in the Marin community.

THE TASK of matching available monies to requests falls upon the young shoulders of the "unit council" elected from among the boys and girls in the home.

Sometimes, if the request list is long and the available funds limited, the unit council members may have to do a bit of "pinching" as to the quality of the year's purchases.

And it has not been unknown for the council members to eliminate one or more of their own requests so that the other boys and girls can receive all of the gifts for which they have asked.

The Juvenile Hall Auxiliary members do the shopping. But they are accompanied by representatives of the boys and girls in the home so that their purchases will be certain to be ones pleasing to the younger generation.

MORE THAN half the boys and girls in the juvenile hall will be permitted to go home to celebrate Christmas with their families. But for some this is not possible.

"For these young people, we try to make Christmas at the hall as home-like as humanly possible," Fogel says.

One big step toward accomplishing this end is to invite a Marin family to spend their Christmas Eve each year in the hall with the young residents.

"This having a family in their midst give the boys and girls here the feeling of belonging that is so important at Christmas time," Fogel explains.

AND NOW THE window scene is nearly completed. Sometimes days are spent on such artwork. And the result is a gay addition to the Christmas atmosphere at the juvenile hall.

A minister is present to deliver a Christmas Eve message.

And there is singing around the trees and the opening of presents—including gifts sent by relatives and friends as well as the purchases made by the hall's auxiliary.

THE RECIPIENTS are permitted to keep all "appropriate" gifts at the hall. Presents, which for various reasons cannot be kept at the hall, are sent to their homes.

And on Christmas Day, of course, there is the traditional feast with all the dishes and treats that have become linked with the great yule holiday.

"At Christmas time," Superintendent Fogel says, "all that is good seems to come out in people. And the juvenile hall is no exception. Antagonisms and fears disappear. And like boys and girls everywhere, the young people are at their very best."

A Pictorial Review Of Desperate '30s

By DON KEOWN

THE DESPERATE YEARS by James D. Horan, Crown Publishers, 288 11½x8½-inch pages, $7.95.

THE FLOWERING HAWTHORN, by Hugh Ross Williamson, Hawthorn Books, 102 pages, $3.50.

THE UNRECONSTRUCTED AMATEUR by Bob Considine, distributed by Stacey's of Palo Alto, 160 11x8½-inch pages, $7.50.

The 1930s were the years when the United States was struggling for economic recovery under the vigorous leadership of FDR, when Hitler was readying his Nazi Germany for world conquest, and when desperadoes and gangsters posed a serious social problem in this country.

It is with these three continuing "stories" that veteran newspaperman James D. Horan is primarily, although not exclusively, concerned in his "The Desperate Years," subtitled "A Pictorial History of the Thirties."

Like the newspapers of the time, Horan seems inclined to distort a bit the importance of the Dillingers, the Lucianos and their criminal ilk, at the expense of some other aspects of the period.

Nor is the book really comprehensive enough to be considered a true history. Rather, it is a "skip and jump" series of quick looks at just some of the interesting events, personalities and movements of the times.

Those who lived through and remember the period made desperate by depression, rising fascism, rampant outlawry, will find old memories returning as they come upon such names as Hauptmann, Long, Coughlin, Louis, Townsend, Von Schuschnigg, Moley, Lewis, Crater, Rockne, et al. Those who did not personally live the experiences of the era will find the book a quick and easy way to pick up some understanding of the feeling and repercussions of those times.

A real bonanza for the reader are the pictures — some 500 of them— assembled from many sources by Horan, an ardent collector of such photos. Horan's text is written in simple, newpaper-reporting style, the best means yet devised for passing along a maximum amount of information in a limited amount of space. Only rarely does he stray from objectivity and indulge in a bit of editorializing.

Generally, Horan deserves credit for a big job well done.

APPROPRIATE for this Christmas season is the small book "The Flowering Hawthorn" by Hugh Ross Williamson, the English historian playwright - novelist and theologian.

Williamson tells in a rather lyrical language and style, and with considerable charm, the story of the coming of Christianity to the English-speaking world—and of its early difficulties.

The flowering hawthorn of the title is the legendary Thorn of Glastonbury, which grew an Weary-all Hill and, according to English tradition, would blossom always at Christmas "mindful of our Lord."

Williamson tells the story of that hawthorn and of the Church of Glastonbury, the first Christian church in the English-speaking world which was to play such a major role in the history of Christianity until its destruction by the Puritans. The story ends with the present century and the restoration of the church.

Eight woodcuts by Clare Leighton, one of them reprinted on this page, illustrate the book.

TOO MANY of America's athletic heroes, past and present, do not deserve the blind idolatry they have received. Among the notable exceptions, however, is Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Stagg has been far more than a pioneer coach who helped build football into the exciting sport it is today. He has contributed greatly to other athletics. But, more important, he has contributed to humanity — and especially youth.

Bob Considine's "The Unreconstructed Amateur," billed as a pictorial biography of Stagg, is more of a tribute to this fine man than it is a biography.

The text is too brief to more than sketch the long career of Stagg. But it does catch the spirit and philosophy of this great American.

And Stagg admirers will delight in the many pictures, taken from the personal files of sportsdom's grand old man.

Here is the kind of leader in whom the sports world can take genuine pride. At the same time, it might wonder why it has not produced more of his kind.

It is appropriate that proceeds from the sale of this book will go toward the building of a physical fitness center at the University of the Pacific in Stockton. It is also fitting that President John F. Kennedy has taken the unusual step of penning a message, paying homage to Stagg's integrity and dedication, for inclusion in the book.

OUR REVIEWERS REPORT ON SOME NEW READING

Romance Missing

WHALING AND OLD SALEM by Frances Diane Robotti, Fountainhead Publishers, 247 pages, $8.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Of all the ways in which men go down to the sea in ships, perhaps none is more invested with high adventure than whaling.

Frances Diane Robotti of New York, in "Whaling and Old Salem," has stripped away much of the romance in an attempt at a definitive work on the whale and his pursuit.

Just why she chose to tie it to Salem, Mass., with a rather tenuous claim for that city as America's first whaling port, is obscure to this reviewer. Much of the book has nothing to do with Salem. It contains, in fact, considerable material (including several pictures) on West Coast whaling which was based at San Francisco.

The book has many facts and much lore on whaling and whalers. As reading matter, however, it leaves much to be desired. Some chapters are narrative; others consist largely of long lists of ships and their masters, excursions into remote bypaths and other distractions.

Mrs. Robotti seems much more able as researcher than as writer.

Stendahl In English

RACINE AND SHAKESPEARE by Stendahl, Crowell - Collier Publishing Co., 220 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Elizabeth Bray.

Stendahl, or Henri Beyle, his real name, wanted a new kind of drama than that holding forth in France in the 1820s. In this book, he set forth what that drama should be, clarifying his thesis by referring to Shakespeare, Byron and Sir Walter Scott (negatively) of England, and turning away from Corneille and Racine of Italy.

Now the book has been published for the first time in its entirety in English.

Reading Stendahl can bring us not only a new awareness of things past, but also brings us perspectives on our own century. Scholarly criticism of the literature of one age, in its efforts to interpret the life of that age, can help us to interpret our own literature and our own age.

Sticky Biography

THOMAS JEFFERSON: Apostle of Liberty, by Marguerite Eyer Wilbur, Liveright Publishing Corp., 404 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Margaret Eyer Wilbur, a Pasadenan (and sometimes Santa Barbaran), has written in her "Thomas Jefferson" a long, fictionized biography of one of our nation's first and greatest apostles of liberty.

Mrs. Wilbur may have done yeoman research into the life of her subject. Unfortunately, the facts are so concealed by a sticky mess of overwriting as to be scarcely recognizable.

Another Book For Rail Fans

INTERMOUNTAIN RAILROADS by Merrill D. Beal, Caxton Printers, 252 pages, $5. Reviewed by Dick Steinheimer.

The world still knows of the drama of Promontory, Utah, when in 1869 trains from east and west met to celebrate driving of the gold spike and completion of the country's first transcontinental.

Those hammer blows that echoed around the world by telegraph not only made history, but they almost ended its recording for the thousands of miles of railroads yet to come.

Only like scenes through a tarnished mirror come the tales of the roughneck camps of Saltese and Mullan made mean and boisterous by the advancing railhead of the Northern Pacific; and even the stories of barroom intrigues that won the ownership of Raton Pass for westward pushing Santa Fe.

Into such a vacuum comes Idaho State College professor Merrill D. Beal to record the early times and development of the railroads of Idaho and adjoining intermountain states.

With the dusty style of a professional historian, Doctor Beal documents the construction of the Utah Central Railroad from Salt Lake City to Ogden, a branch of the transcontinental line built by the insulted Mormons of Salt Lake City whose town had been bypassed in the westward drive.

The bulk of "Intermountain Railroads" deals with the construction later of the Utah and Northern Railroad north to Garrison, Mont., most of which, like the Utah Central, is now a main route of the Union Pacific.

The beginnings of the future great junction center of Pocatello are well described although not particularly colorfully.

Verdict: Good book for the intermountain reader as well as rail and history buffs.

Two Christmases For Them

Aldersly Residents Blend American, Danish Customs

By DON KEOWN

Mrs. Agnes Larsen has known — and loved — Christmas as it is observed in two lands: In her native Denmark, which she left 48 years ago, and in her adopted land of the United States.

Frequent trips back to Denmark since her departure from that country have seen her there often at Christmas time.

And, she says, "there is nothing quite so wonderful as Christmas time—or Jul—in Denmark."

FORTUNATELY for Mrs. Larsen, even though thousands of miles will separate her this Christmas from the land of Hans Christian Andersen, she will enjoy many of the Danish traditions and customs. For at Aldersly Danish Home, where she has resided in San Rafael for the past 10 years, Danish and American Christmas customs are blended into a colorful three-day observance.

But, first let's listen to Mrs. Larsen as she tells of some of the Danish holiday activities which she remembers from her girlhood in the small town of Koge and from her more recent trips back home to visit relatives and friends:

"The preparations start early in December . . . around Dec. 1. And generally speaking, Christmas is less commercialized there.

"The people, especially in the small towns, make most of their gifts—knitting sweaters, etc. And most of the ornaments for the tree and home are also made. This serves to keep the children busy during those exciting pre-Christmas weeks.

"Christmas is a time of the family—a time to come home.

"THE MEETING of the ships from America bringing relatives back for Christmas is a big thing. The relations gather on the dock to meet them. There is Christmas music playing. And big welcoming signs carry the family names of those awaiting loved ones on board.

"Now many of these Danish-Americans make the trip by plane. But the airplane can never completely replace the ship for Christmas travel back to Denmark. It just isn't as romantic.

"In Denmark the major celebration occurs on Christmas Eve. The tree is not put up until the day before. Stores close around 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and about 4 p.m. everyone goes to church. Then they return home for the traditional dinner.

"On the farm or in the small town, the menu will almost certainly include pork roast with Danish sausages and red cabbage and, for dessert — the traditional rice boiled in cream, topped with cinnamon and sugar and containing one almond. Whoever gets the almond also gets a special gift.

"And a special kind of beverage, a sort of Christmas ale, is served with the meal.

"In the cities, the main dish may be goose or duck stuffed with apples and prunes. But the boiled rice with the almond will be served there, too.

"IT IS ON Christmas Eve that the Danish Santa—we call him Yulemand — visits the homes and gives out the gifts. And it is on Christmas Eve the children first see the tree which has been decorated the night before.

"The streets in Denmark are decorated in much the same manner as American streets. But in Copenhagen, the main street is blocked off except to foot traffic. And what you have is a mall of electrically-lighted pines.

"But even the small towns and villages have their street decorations.

"Part of the Christmas season is the Advent observance, since the Danes are largely Lutherans. This takes place during the last four weeks of the year. Wreaths containing four lights are used to mark the occasion, with the first light being turned on the first Sunday of Advent and then an additional light being illuminated for each Sunday that follows until the wreath is completely lighted.

"And cookie baking, of course, is always a big thing in Denmark during the Christmas season. A must is the klejner, a kind of Danish doughnut cooked in deep fat. And there are the brown syrup cookies. And many other different kinds of cookies.

"DURING THE holiday season you visit each other's homes and sample each other's cookies. There is an awful lot of nibbling in Danish homes in December.

"And something the Danes have that Americans do not have is Small Christmas Eve on Dec. 23. It is then that the aebleskiver, baked in a special pan, is eaten.

"In theory, all the Christmas preparations are through on Dec. 23, so that there need be no last-minute rush and all can thoroughly enjoy the holiday.

"There are many other Danish traditions. In the rural areas, the families still go out and cut their Christmas trees. Fancy cloths are embroidered to be placed under the trees to catch the drippings from the lighted candles which are still used frequently as decorations.

"And it is the custom to give business acquaintances and friends live flower decorations. Growing these hothouse flowers is a thriving business.

"And table decorations are a must."

At the Aldersly Home, Mrs. Larsen, who serves as chairman of the residents' committee, and her fellow senior citizens who reside there, are smart enough to enjoy not only the Danish celebration of Dec. 23 and 24, but also the American Christmas of Dec. 25.

Jazz, Baroque For Christmas

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, FM & Cultural Guide

JINGLE BELL JAZZ — 12 different jazz artists—Columbia CS 8693 or CL 1893:

Just what I've been wanting for Christmas for a long time!

If you're hip, friend, you are getting mighty tired about this time o' year of Christmas carols ground out by every square group from Lawrence Welk to the Hollywood Bowl. This new album is the perfect holiday companion for the jazz fan.

Among the highlights are Duke Ellington's swinging "Jingle Bells," Carmen McRae's warm-hearted "Christmas Song," Paul Horn's terrific arrangement of "We Three King of Orient Are," and the Lambert, Hendricks and Ross Trio's hilarious Walt Kelley lyric, "Deck Us All with Boston Charlie."

THE GOLDEN AGE OF HARPSICORD MUSIC — Rafael Puyana, harpsicord — Mercury Stereo SR 90304:

The harpsichord seems to have a major role in the "Christmasy sound" of much Baroque music in which it appears.

This album should make a good holiday background then, or the perfect gift for the connoisseur of this particular instrument's delicate sound.

Due to Mercury's recording techniques and almost overbearing high fidelity, the effect is far from delicate. However, by turning down the volume one can achieve a sound more appropriate to hearing the keyboard instrument in person.

Works by a dozen composers plus that world-famous man, Anonymous, are included in Puyana's recital. The program is well-assembled for variety and interest.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Story Of First Christmas Gives Day's True Meaning

TELL ME ABOUT CHRISTMAS by Mary Alice Jones, Rand McNally, $2.50. Reviewed by Claudia Royal.

Mary Alice Jones, lover of little children, takes the story of the first Christmas, and gives it the true meaning of this memorable day.

Using happy family activities, she shows the spiritual significance of the occasion. In the child's own language she goes back through the Bible and shows why and how Christmas came to be.

A good book for family reading-aloud during the Christmas season.

WITH BELLS ON by Katherine Milhous, Scribner's, $3.25. Reviewed by Claudia Royal.

This charming story tells of Christmas among the Pennsylvania Dutch people many years ago.

"I'll be home for Christmas with bells on," said Jonathan, as he drove away with Uncle Ned in a Conestoga wagon.

Younger brother Chrissley and sister Becky promised to make the "putz" or manger scene. This is the story of how they did it, and of how Jonathan reached home just in time for Christmas—with bells on.

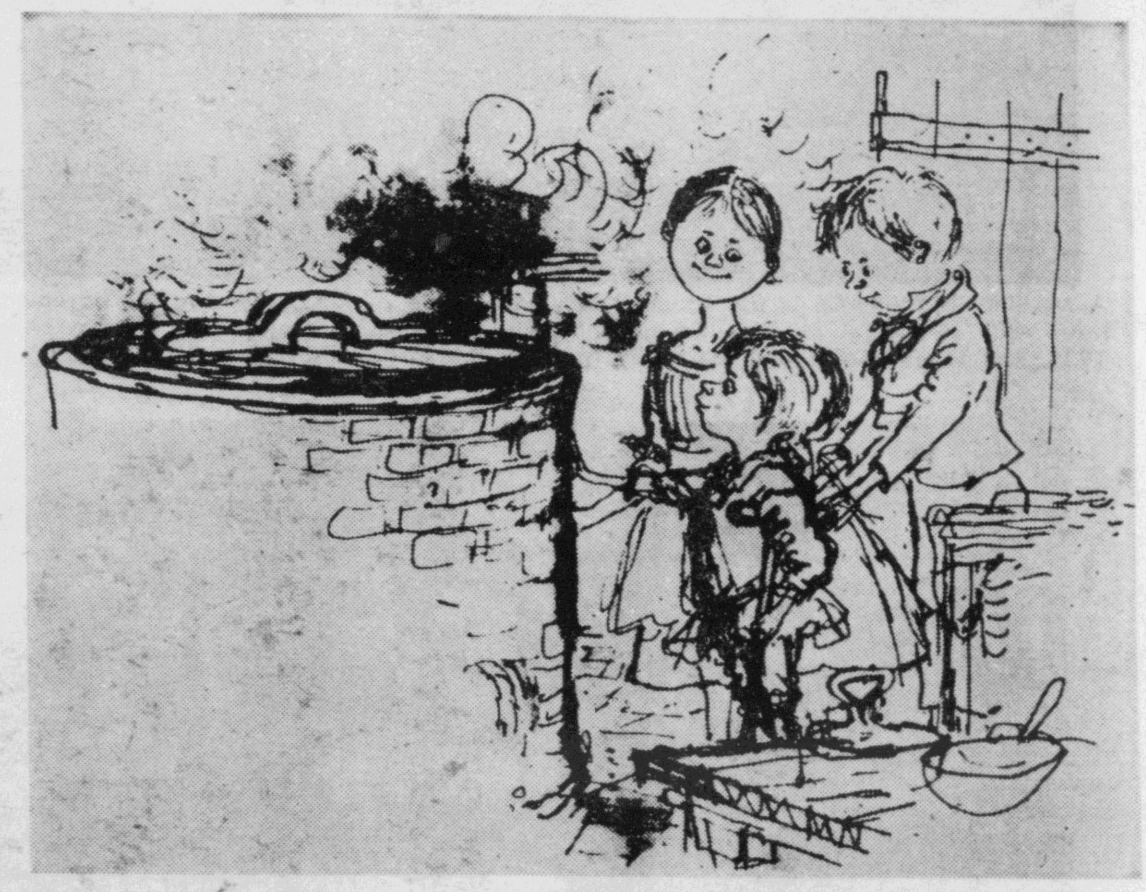
SCROOGE TREMBLES before the Ghost of Chrisimas Present. The drawing is from Ronald Searle's illustrated edition of the Charles Dickens classic, "A Christmas Carol."



THE CRATCHIT CHILDREN, including the immortal Tiny Tim, eagerly await Christmas dinner, listening to "the pudding singing in the copper." The Searle's version of the Dickens Christmas story was published by World Publishing Co. It's a story that never grows old at Christmas time.

Adventure Series For The Juniors

THE RIDDLE OF THE HAUNTED RIVER by Lawrence Earl, Little, Brown and Co., 160 pages, $1.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Juniors, too, need "escapist" reading. Little, Brown and Co. has just published a new series, called the "Secret Circle" books, which seem to fill that need especially well.

In common, the books all have a Canadian outdoors setting. They also feature adventure and mystery, a combination which youngsters have been "gobbling up" for generations.

The first of the six books in the series to reach us is Lawrence Earl's "The Riddle of the Haunted River." It is a lively yarn about teen-agers who brave both the perils of the river and some evil men during a canoe trip on the Miramichi.

Along with the exciting adventures, Earl has sandwiched in a considerable amount of lore on fishing and outdoor living in general. The violence is restrained.

It is the kind of book we reveled in during our own youth. And we doubt if the reading tastes of youngsters have changed measureably in this regards.

Other titles in the series — "The Legend of Devil's Lode," "The Mystery of Monster Lake," etc. — indicate that those books, too, are cut from the same general pattern.

The publisher says the books are intended for boys and girls 10 to 14. If "The Riddle of the Haunted River" is typical, we feel they will be most successful with boys—about 12 or 13. The very reasonable $1.95 price tag which Little, Brown and Co. has placed on these books is worth special notice.

A MARIN SHOWPLACE is the Leonard W. Buck estate in Ross, covering more than five acres of park-like grounds. The main residence, built in 1938, has seven rooms with as many more in the large, above-ground basement. A creek traverses the property, which is profusely planted with flowering shrubbery and magnificent shade trees. Water for irrigation is obtained from the estate's own well. IN A WOODED SETTING, among the trees and paths on the spacious Buck property, is a two-bedroom guest cottage with full kitchen and two baths. Nearby is a 60-foot filtered swimming pool lined with porcelain tile. An elaborate brick barbecue, dressing rooms with two showers for bathers, and a bar complete the improvements in this area.

THE MENU will include roast pork and Danish sausages, crisp-browned pork rind, red cabbage (sour and sweet, and hot), risengrod med mandel (the boiled rice), sugar-browned Irish potatoes, pickled beets, sweet pickles, olives, applesauce, red wine, coffee and the traditional Danish cookies such as klejner, brown cookies and the vanilla pretzel.

After dinner, the celebration will move into the social hall where Danish Christmas hymns will be sung. For safety reasons the Danish practice of joining hands and forming a circle around the tree must be omitted. But there will be talks of other Christmases spent on both sides of the Atlantic. And fruit, cookies and wine until time for bed, for another strenuous day lies ahead.

On Tuesday, breakfast at 8:30 will consist of bacon and eggs, toast, cereal, juice, milk, coffee and the Danish Julkringle—a pastry.

There will be partying and coffee drinking throughout the afternoon.

And finally, in the evening, the traditional American Christmas dinner with turkey and trimmings, wine, dessert and coffee.

IF EXHAUSTION has not yet set in, more private get-togethers and good conversation with the inevitable cookies and coffee will follow.

Yes, at Aldersly Mrs. Larsen and her friends have hit upon a way of doubling the enjoyment of that already greatest of holidays by holding two Christmas observances — one Danish, one American. And both wonderful.

DANISH CHRISTMAS RECIPES

AEBLESKIVER

2 cups flour
2 cups buttermilk
4 eggs
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. baking soda
a little sugar
a little salt
vanilla and cardamom

Mix flour and baking powder and soda thoroughly, then mix with buttermilk and egg yokes. Whip egg whites until stiff and add. Flavor with sugar, salt, vanilla and cardamon.

Bake in special pan. Heat pan. Melt mixture of one-half shortening, one-half margarine plus a little butter. Pour a little in each Aebleskiver hole, then fill hole about half full with batter. Turn when brown on one side. (A knitting pin is excellent for turning.)

Serve hot, decorated with powdered sugar or strawberry jam. Makes about 60 pieces.

THIN SWEET PRETZELS

½ cup sugar
¾ cup butter
1 egg
1 tsp. carbonated ammonia
½ tsp. cardamom
2½ cups flour

Cream butter and sugar, add egg slightly beated, sifted flour and cardamom, and the carbonated ammonia dissolved in a little water. Work dough very gently, roll very thin and cut into strips.

Shape into pretzel, flatten with rolling pin, dip in a slightly beaten egg to which a little cream has been added. Dip in sugar and bake at 350 degrees until light brown. Keep in a tight jar.

KLEJNER

3 eggs
1 cup sugar
½ cup butter
3 or 4 cups flour
4 tbls. cream
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. vanilla or cardamom

Beat eggs and sugar, add cream and melted butter and stir in enough flour to make batter stiff enough to roll out. Cut in diamond shape. Make slit in center and pull one end through slit.

Cook in deep fat until light brown. Turn with a kitchen fork. Place on brown paper to cool. Use two pounds shortening for cooking this portion.

BROWN COOKIES

1½ cup shortening
½ cup light molasses
4 cups flour
2 beaten eggs
1 tsp. baking soda
2 tsp. cloves
2 tsp. cinnamon
2 tsp. ginger
2 cups sugar

Place the shortening (half butter, half margarine), sugar and molasses on heat. When melted, remove from fire and add rest of ingredients. Mix well. Cool and form in rolls. Cut very thin.

Place half a blanched almond on each. Bake in a 375 degree oven until crisp. When cool, keep in tightly-covered jar.

RISENGROD AND MANDEL

Rice is boiled in milk in a double boiler until tender, then served hot with a little sugar and cinnamon sprinkled over it. A large lump of butter is placed in the center into which each spoonful is dipped. At Christmastime the mandel, or almond, is placed in the rice, whole and uncooked. Whoever gets the almond in his portion gets an extra Christmas gift — usually a box of chocolate or other goodies.

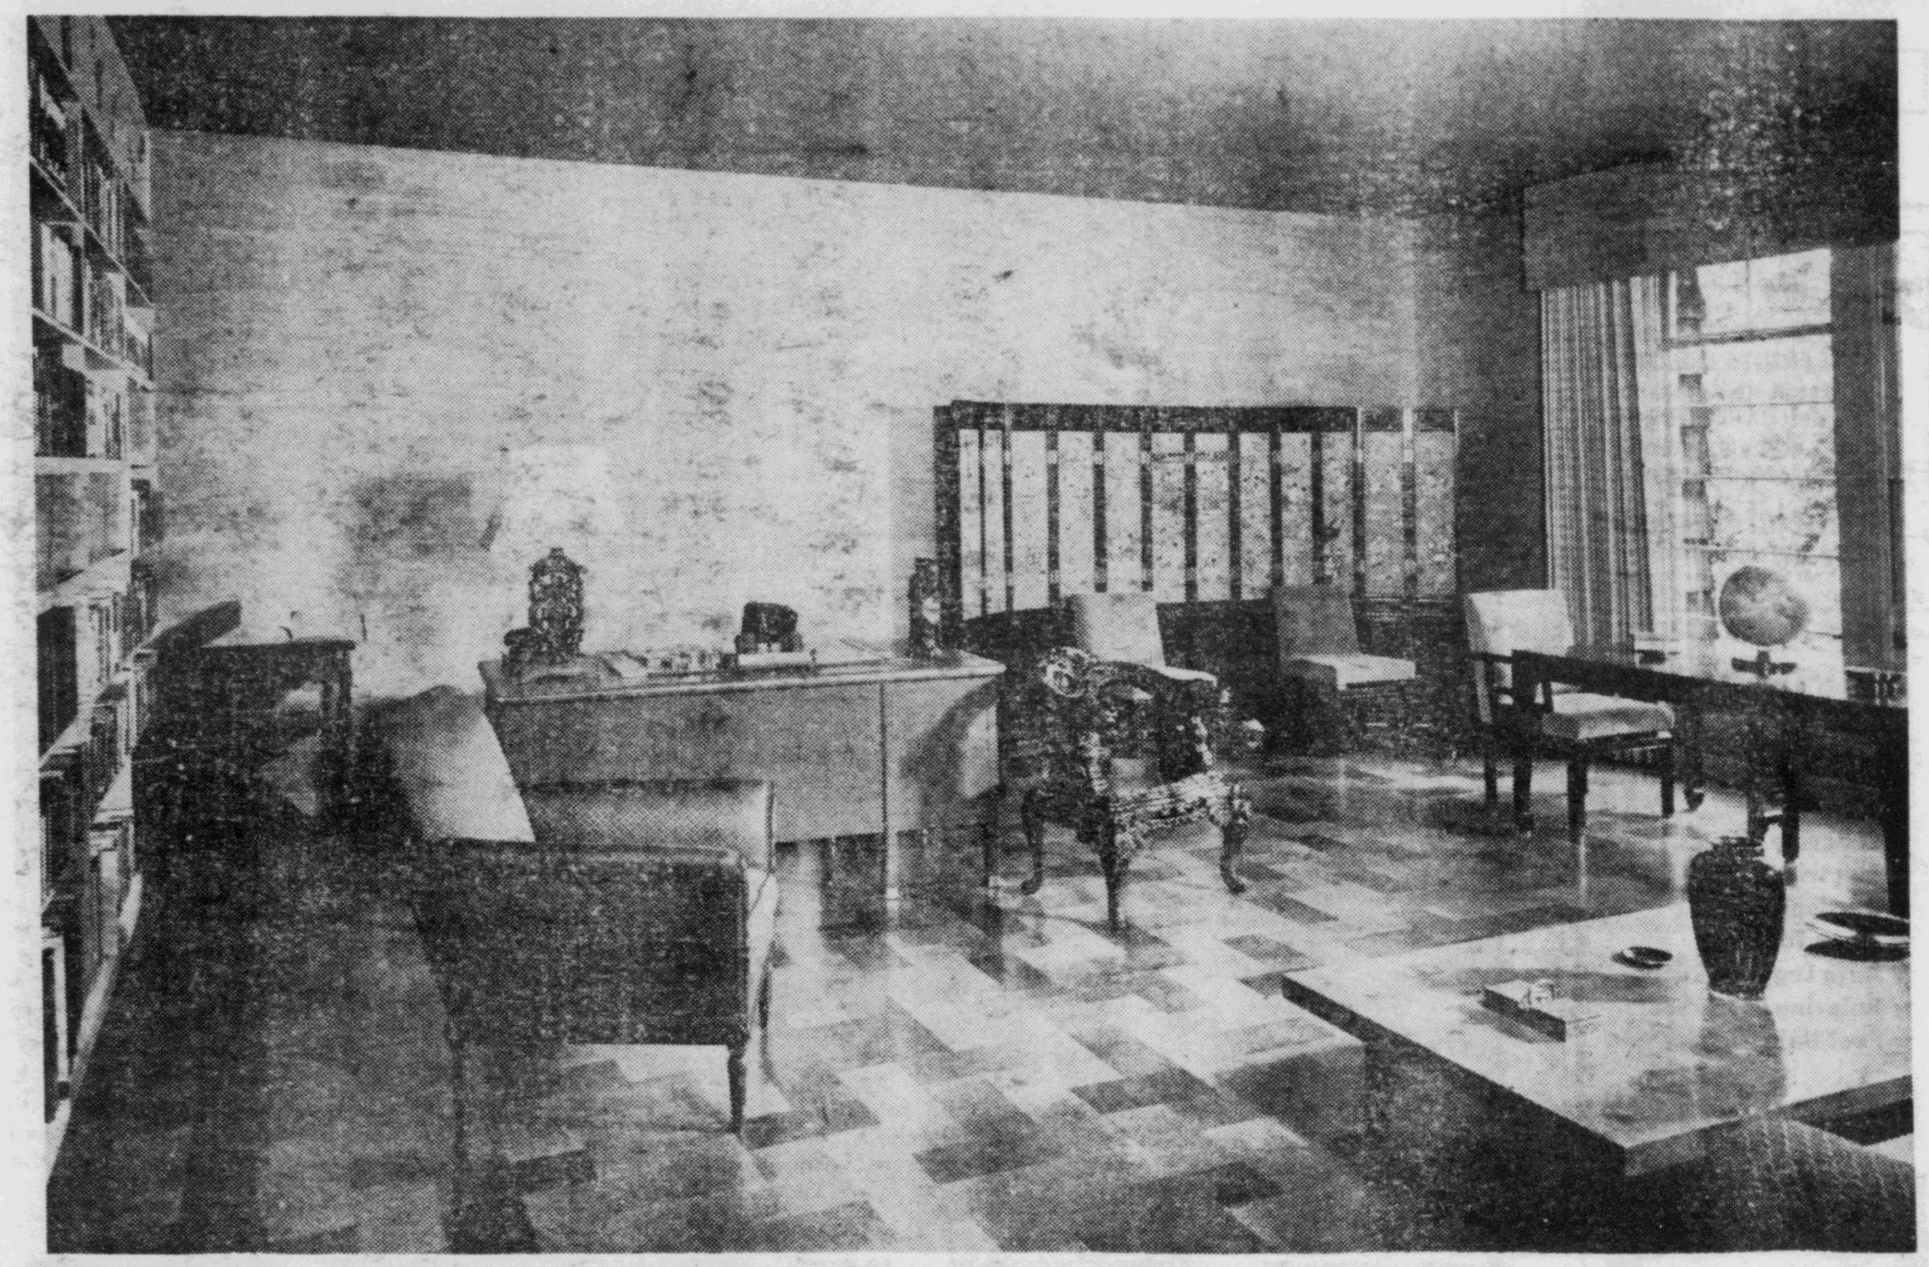
The Look Of Luxury In Ross Mansion



THE LARGE LIBRARY in the main house on the Leonard W. Buck estate home in Ross boasts cork floors, walls finished in grass cloth, view windows and floor-to-ceiling bookcases along one wall. It all goes to make this area in the huge Buck mansion a delightful example of restful suburban living at its very best.

LUXURY IS THE keynote to the interior appointments of the Buck mansion. A beautiful pipe organ with two consoles has its pipes cleverly concealed behind a shoji screen wall in the living room. Indirect lighting in the ceiling, matched wall panels of handsome Wisconsin birch and a concealed bar are other living room features. (See page M-18 for additional photos of the Buck estate.)

SHE WRAPS THOUSANDS of gift packages during the year, but for Mrs. W. P. Buchwald this past week has been her busiest. She is the gift-wrapper at Lu Dell's in San Rafael. And as the Christmas buying splurge reached its peak, she was hard-pressed to keep up with the demand for her artistic holiday creations. (Independent-Journal photo)

10,000 Gift-Wrapped Items

That's The Annual Output Of One San Rafael Store

By DON KEOWN

So you had trouble gift wrapping your Christmas presents this year?

How would you like to wrap several thousand a year?

That's what Mrs. W. P. Buchwald does.

She's the gift-wrapper at Lu Dells on San Rafael's Fourth Street. Employed the year around, she does almost all of the Lu Dells wrapping through most of the year. At the peak of the Christmas season, she receives assistance from Dell and Lu Shuttleworth, the co-owners of the store, and other Lu Dells employees.

AND IN A year, the store gift wraps more than 10,000 parcels, perhaps a quarter of that number for mailing.

Approximately 30 per cent of that volume comes at Christmas time.

There was a time, Dell Shuttleworth says, when Christmas accounted for a larger portion of sales and wrapping. But wedding gifts have gradually increased as a source of revenue at the store "until now June is nearly as big a month for us as December."

Still, it is at Christmas time that gift-wrapping goes on a 12-hours-a-day basis at the store.

What does it take to be a successful gift-wrapper?

"Well," says Dell, "it takes both natural skill and a lot of practice. When Mrs. Buchwald went to work for us, she had no previous experience at gift wrapping. But she did have a knack for that sort of thing, which made it easier to train her."

The gift-wrapper's work is simplified considerably by the use of gift boxes.

"WE PURCHASE gift boxes in 37 different sizes and shapes," says Dell. "If it wasn't for that, the job would be impossible."

As it is, the major job of the wrapper consists of ribboning and bowing. But there is the occasional gift purchase which, because of size or shape, will not fit in one of the boxes. Then it must be separately wrapped.

"And this," says Dell, "slows us down considerably."

Working at peak speed, Mrs. Buchwald can wrap about 50 gifts in an hour.

In all, Lu Dells purchases approximately $4,000 worth of boxes, wrappings and ribbons in a year. The bows, for instance, are purchased in lots of 2,500 at a time—white for weddings, pink for showers, gold for anniversaries, red for Christmas, lavender for special occasions, etc.

Tex-Sheen ribbon is purchased in two widths, three-quarters of an inch and one inch. The gift wrap paper comes in huge rolls weighing from 35 to 40 pounds.

Lu Dells, which deals in quality dinnerware, silverware and glassware, not only gift wraps packages, but also packs and mails.

Shredded white tissue is used as the packing for the interior box, with additional excelsior between the gift box and the outside shipping carton.

As indicative of the careful job of packing and addressing which Lu Dells does, Dell reports that "we have had only $10 in damage and one package lost in the mail all this year."

WHAT ARE the common mistakes of the person who undertakes the wrappings of his gifts at home?

Most problems arise, Dell says, "because the wrapper undertakes the task without the proper materials."

If twine isn't around, string may be substituted, etc.

"It's best to make certain that, before you start the job, you have on hand, first, all the necessary paraphernalia for turning out an attractive gift package, and, second, all the needed materials to make the parcel safe if it is to be sent through the mail."

Insufficient packing is a common error, he adds.

"Sometimes, in order to save postage, a mailer will conserve on packing to get a lighter package," he explains. "This can be costly by resulting in a broken article."

In a package mailed by Lu Dells, the gift item will be outweighed considerably by the box, trimmings, packing, shipping carton, etc.

The right width of paper is important, too. Too often the home wrapper tries to make a too-narrow or too-short piece of gift wrapping paper that is on hand do a job for which it was not intended.

BUT, DELL admits, the home wrapper who gathers up the proper materials and then takes the proper amount of time, can probably do a better, or at least more elaborate, job of gift-wrapping than can Lu Dells.

"I don't think they can do any better job of preparing for shipping," he says, "but they can do a fancier gift-wrapping job. It's simply a matter of time. We have too many to wrap in too few days."

And with that he again turned his attention to helping Mrs. Buchwald in the struggle to keep up with a mounting stack of last-minute Christmas gift purchases.

IN ADDITION to all the usual frustrations and problems which confront the brave soul courageous enough to undertake his or her own gift-wrapping, little Ellen Berne, 4, has an added obstacle. It seems that her assistant, Jingles, the kitten, is somewhat more of a handicap than a help. Ellen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Berne of Santa Venetia. STILL MORE EXTRA accommodations are to be found on the Leonard W. Buck estate in Ross in this detached, six-car garage constructed of steel-reinforced concrete with a brick facing. Above it is an upstairs apartment with living room, bedroom, kitchen, bath and studio. Surfaced driveways wander from the parking area throughout the grounds.

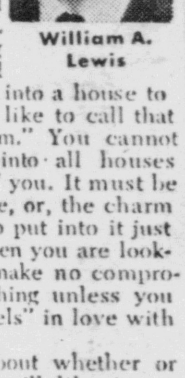
THIS IS ONE OF TWO master bedroom suites in the Buck home. It has a fireplace with brass and pewter appointments and an ornamental stone hearth flanked by bookcases. The other has a marble fireplace. Both have deep-pile wall-to-wall carpeting, banks of closets, connecting dressing rooms and porches.

"Realty Ramblings"

All too often people are sold houses they should never have purchased. Because, even though they seem to like the house, sometimes there is lacking from it the SPIRIT of the house for the type of living the new owners will be trying to enjoy five years hence.

Sometimes a prospective buyer lays too much stress on strong timbers, fireproof roofs, and copper piping, forgetting that often death comes to a building, not because of a weak structure, but, for want of SPIRIT.



William A. Lewis

A home is more than a furnace, copper piping and electrical outlets. There is something more that you, and only you, can put into a house to give it SPIRIT. I like to call that something "Charm." You cannot put that charm into all houses that merely "suit" you. It must be your kind of house, or, the charm you try so hard to put into it just won't take. So when you are looking for a house, make no compromise and do nothing unless you fall "head over heels" in love with it.

Don't worry about whether or not your friends will like it; or, whether it has enough artistic touch. Rather, make sure that you feel inside yourself that it is your kind of house and that you will make of it a "home."

Having assured yourself of this, then look to the details of construction; for, without having first gained the SPIRIT, there is no rhyme nor reason to good construction.

THE HOME GIFT-WRAPPER can excel the store creations, according to Dell Shuttleworth, co-owner of Lu Dell's, if he or she is properly equipped for the task ahead. "It is simply a matter of having more time," he explains. These beautifully-wrapped packages were created by the Tie-Tie Division of the Chicago Printed String Co. to show how its products can be used with imagination to lend a parcel just the right added holiday flair.

BUT MRS. BUCHWALD need offer no apologies for her work. The parcels are gay and colorful. And most important, when prepared for mailing, they are well packed and tightly tied. Gift boxes in 37 different sizes and shapes simplify her work, so that the emphasis is upon ribboning and bowing. (Independent-Journal photo)

ONE OF OUR MOST wonderful native plants — indeed the odds-on favorite of many gardeners — is the colorful Toyon. With its handsome green foliage and bumper crop of bright red berries in fall and winter, the added bonus of clusters of white flowers in spring seems almost too much of a good thing. The photograph seen here shows a close-up of the berry. It is important for gardeners to remember that being a native and liking everyday conditions in the garden, the Toyon will take off and grow sometimes to heights of 25 feet or so as a multiple-trunked tree. It can also be trained as a large bushy shrub. Just to be safe—give it plenty of room. The inset shows you how your Toyon will look in a gallon can as seen at you nurseryman's headquarters. GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Living Christmas trees are still available for indoor and outdoor use.
- Most bareroot materials—roses, fruit trees and shade trees—have arrived in nurseries. The sooner you plant it, the better.
- Lift dahlia clumps and store them in a dry place until next spring. Most gardeners wait until spring to divide the clumps.
- Plant spring blooming bulbs. Daffodils, tulips, hyacinths, grape hyacinths and others should go into the ground without further delay.
- Wait until January or early February to prune established roses and until February to prune fuchsias.

THE CHRISTMAS BERRY

A Practical, Colorful Native

Of all the native plants which grace our state, none has more practical value than the colorful Christmas berry.

Here is a shrub or small tree which fits readily into the garden setting. It has handsome green foliage, white spring bloom and bright red berries in late fall. The latter are ideal for decking the halls during our holiday season.

There are many names by which you might find the California Christmas berry. Botanists call it Photinia, while old friends know it as Toyon or California holly. By any name, however, it is still the same fine shrub which nurserymen rank with the Ceanothus as one of our two most useful natives.

PHOTINIA, the botanical name, is derived from the Greek photeinos, which means "shining," and that is one of the first things you notice about this fine shrub. At any season it is an evergreen mass of glossy green, saw-toothed leaves, some four inches long. These leaves make a rich background in the garden. They are spotted occasionally with bronzy tones and often with bright red leaves, which turn that way just before they drop off the shrub.

In spring, the Christmas berry is aglow with flowers. These are pink in the bud, white when they open and are borne in clusters which later become berries. In full bloom, the shrub is often completely covered with white flowers. The flowers are not spectacular, but in the manner of a Pyracantha, their numbers make a fine show. They are mighty nice to have around.

In fall come the berries, bushels of them, which countless berry seekers tramp over the countryside to cut for decoration. You wonder sometimes why people go to such trouble, when planting one shrub would take care of their berry needs with plenty to spare.

Plant Christmas berry in any normal soil and don't make it struggle for a start in life.

Bring Holiday Spirit To Your Table Decor

"Deck the halls . . ." they sing at Christmas time.

And this happiest time of the year is also the time to deck your table in colorful holiday decor.

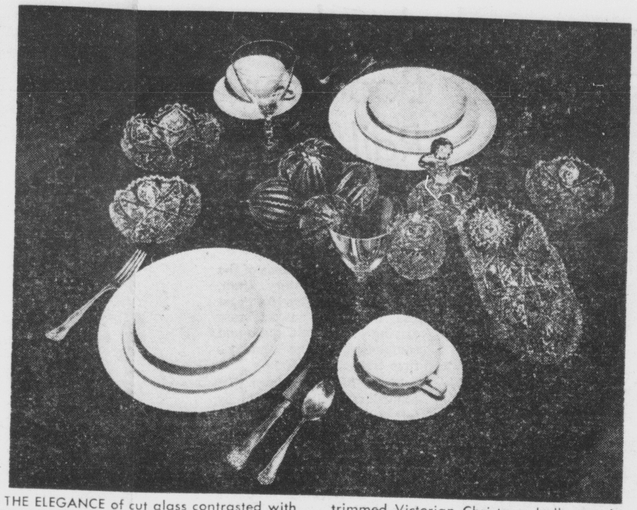
The very active Tiburon Peninsula Club earlier this month asked some of that area's merchants and individual residents to design dramatic holiday tables—for dinners, luncheons, teas, tete-a-tetes, parties.

The result was, literally, a festival of creative ideas on how to bring the holiday spirit to the dinner table.

Members and their guests reaped a bumper harvest of ideas for their own holiday decor.

And now, thanks to these photographs taken by Independent-Journal photographer Bob Hax, you, too, can benefit from the artistic ideas of these creative peninsula residents.

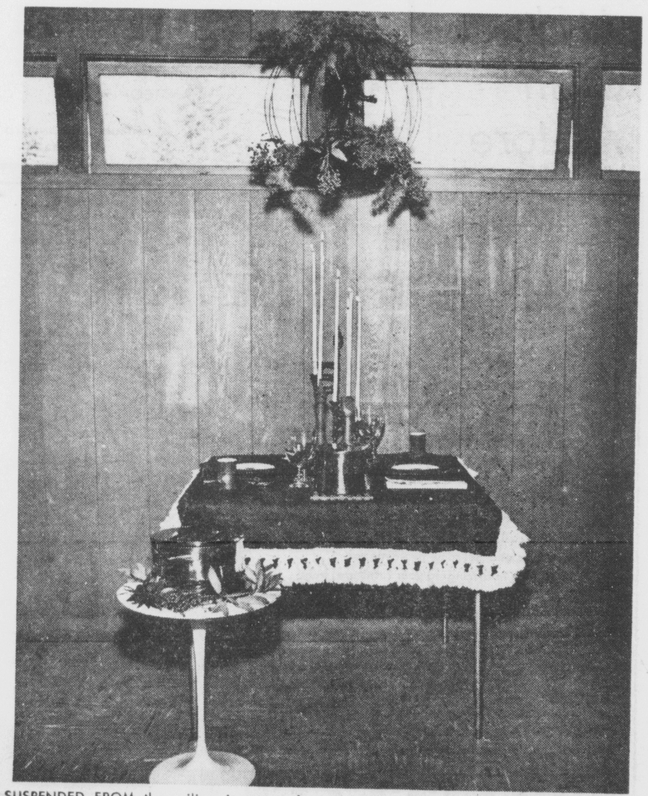
RED, BURNT ORANGE and gold are the colors chosen by Mrs. Thomas E. Stanton for a holiday dinner table. The cloth is half red and half burnt orange with contrasting napkins. In the center is an iron Swedish Santa Lucia crown with "jewels" of winter pears and cranberries alternating with the orange candles. A red Edam cheese enhances the color scheme and brilliant orange persimmons are served on black lacquered trays. The crystal is gold-rimmed and the oversize walnut in the foreground is gilded.



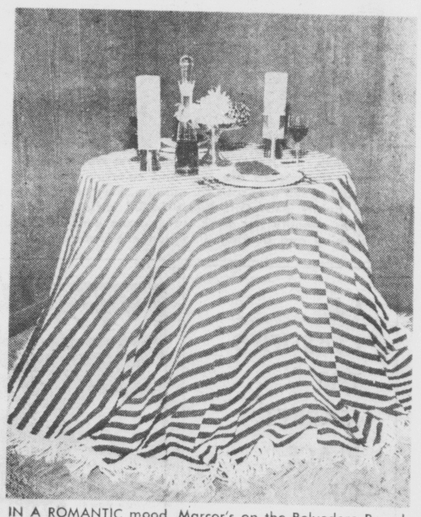
THE ELEGANCE of cut glass contrasted with modern crystal and dishes is emphasized by Tiburon's the Wild West Shop. Velvet-trimmed Victorian Christmas balls are the centerpiece. The antique silver contrasts to the olive green cloth.

EUCALYPTUS BRANCHES and hydrangea blossoms shelter a ceramic Madonna in this centerpiece, designed for a Christmas tea party by Mrs. William Davis of Belvedere. The holiday goodies will be served on the leaf-shaped wooden tea plates, and tea will be served in the Oriental cups. (Independent-Journal photos by Bob Hax)

"JOIN US FOR A CURRY SUPPER," reads the invitation, and the exotic food is served on multi-colored Heath pottery including muted blue, mustard yellow, off white, olive green and brown. An inverted casserole forms the base for the dried arrangement which swirls up around a piece of driftwood, accented by glass balls. In the center of the condiment tray is an artichoke sprayed white, which may be used as an hors d'oeuvre server.



SUSPENDED FROM the ceiling is a metal globe, with a charming black angel and Christmas greens, to accent the table designed by Leonard Linn of Tiburon. Slim Swedish tapers sweep up from the candelabra. The utensils are stainless steel and the dishes brown Dansk ware. The supper is served in gleaming brass casseroles. The cloth is olive green felt with heavy white fringe.



IN A ROMANTIC mood, Marcor's on the Belvedere Boardwalk has set a table for an intimate New Year's Eve supper for two. The cloth is a dazzling red and white stripe trimmed with white fringe. A silver compote holds torn white chrysanthemums and gilded pine cones complemented by silver candleholders with large white candles.

A GILDED WICKER tree decorated with wood roses was designed by Tiburon's Tahitian Tiki shop for a Polynesian holiday buffet. A wooden tiki surveys the hand-carved Maori bowl, a heavy breadboard with a shell-handled knife and an hor d'oeuvre tray with shell-handled utensils. The fruit is served on a large sea shell and the small condiment dish is of carved mother-of-pearl with matching spoon and fork.

A CHILDREN'S "birthday in December" party is planned by Tiburon's general store, "The Bird and Hound." Dancing peasant figures dangle from a Minori, a mobile representing the traditional folk art of Japan. The Spanish "rooster" basket in the center is full of assorted toys, favors and shiny red apples. As a practical gesture, the tablecloth is a large chartreuse beach towel and the dishes are green spatter enamel ware (and unbreakable). In the background the hostess' dress is on display with a doll in a matching dress.

A Pictorial Review Of Desperate '30s

By DON KEOWN

THE DESPERATE YEARS by James D. Horan, Crown Publishers, 288 11½x8½-inch pages, $7.95.

THE FLOWERING HAWTHORN, by Hugh Ross Williamson, Hawthorn Books, 102 pages, $3.50.

THE UNRECONSTRUCTED AMATEUR by Bob Considine, distributed by Stacey's of Palo Alto, 160 11x8½-inch pages, $7.50.

The 1930s were the years when the United States was struggling for economic recovery under the vigorous leadership of FDR, when Hitler was readying his Nazi Germany for world conquest, and when desperadoes and gangsters posed a serious social problem in this country.

It is with these three continuing "stories" that veteran newspaperman James D. Horan is primarily, although not exclusively, concerned in his "The Desperate Years," subtitled "A Pictorial History of the Thirties."

Like the newspapers of the time, Horan seems inclined to distort a bit the importance of the Dillingers, the Lucianos and their criminal ilk, at the expense of some other aspects of the period.

Nor is the book really comprehensive enough to be considered a true history. Rather, it is a "skip and jump" series of quick looks at just some of the interesting events, personalities and movements of the times.

Those who lived through and remember the period made desperate by depression, rising fascism, rampant outlawry, will find old memories returning as they come upon such names as Hauptmann, Long, Coughlin, Louis, Townsend, Von Schuschnigg, Moley, Lewis, Crater, Rockne, et al. Those who did not personally live the experiences of the era will find the book a quick and easy way to pick up some understanding of the feeling and repercussions of those times.

A real bonanza for the reader are the pictures — some 500 of them— assembled from many sources by Horan, an ardent collector of such photos. Horan's text is written in simple, newpaper-reporting style, the best means yet devised for passing along a maximum amount of information in a limited amount of space. Only rarely does he stray from objectivity and indulge in a bit of editorializing.

Generally, Horan deserves credit for a big job well done.

APPROPRIATE for this Christmas season is the small book "The Flowering Hawthorn" by Hugh Ross Williamson, the English historian playwright - novelist and theologian.

Williamson tells in a rather lyrical language and style, and with considerable charm, the story of the coming of Christianity to the English-speaking world—and of its early difficulties.

The flowering hawthorn of the title is the legendary Thorn of Glastonbury, which grew an Weary-all Hill and, according to English tradition, would blossom always at Christmas "mindful of our Lord."

Williamson tells the story of that hawthorn and of the Church of Glastonbury, the first Christian church in the English-speaking world which was to play such a major role in the history of Christianity until its destruction by the Puritans. The story ends with the present century and the restoration of the church.

Eight woodcuts by Clare Leighton, one of them reprinted on this page, illustrate the book.

TOO MANY of America's athletic heroes, past and present, do not deserve the blind idolatry they have received. Among the notable exceptions, however, is Amos Alonzo Stagg.

Stagg has been far more than a pioneer coach who helped build football into the exciting sport it is today. He has contributed greatly to other athletics. But, more important, he has contributed to humanity — and especially youth.

Bob Considine's "The Unreconstructed Amateur," billed as a pictorial biography of Stagg, is more of a tribute to this fine man than it is a biography.

The text is too brief to more than sketch the long career of Stagg. But it does catch the spirit and philosophy of this great American.

And Stagg admirers will delight in the many pictures, taken from the personal files of sportsdom's grand old man.

Here is the kind of leader in whom the sports world can take genuine pride. At the same time, it might wonder why it has not produced more of his kind.

It is appropriate that proceeds from the sale of this book will go toward the building of a physical fitness center at the University of the Pacific in Stockton. It is also fitting that President John F. Kennedy has taken the unusual step of penning a message, paying homage to Stagg's integrity and dedication, for inclusion in the book.

OUR REVIEWERS REPORT ON SOME NEW READING

Romance Missing

WHALING AND OLD SALEM by Frances Diane Robotti, Fountainhead Publishers, 247 pages, $8.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Of all the ways in which men go down to the sea in ships, perhaps none is more invested with high adventure than whaling.

Frances Diane Robotti of New York, in "Whaling and Old Salem," has stripped away much of the romance in an attempt at a definitive work on the whale and his pursuit.

Just why she chose to tie it to Salem, Mass., with a rather tenuous claim for that city as America's first whaling port, is obscure to this reviewer. Much of the book has nothing to do with Salem. It contains, in fact, considerable material (including several pictures) on West Coast whaling which was based at San Francisco.

The book has many facts and much lore on whaling and whalers. As reading matter, however, it leaves much to be desired. Some chapters are narrative; others consist largely of long lists of ships and their masters, excursions into remote bypaths and other distractions.

Mrs. Robotti seems much more able as researcher than as writer.

Stendahl In English

RACINE AND SHAKESPEARE by Stendahl, Crowell - Collier Publishing Co., 220 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Elizabeth Bray.

Stendahl, or Henri Beyle, his real name, wanted a new kind of drama than that holding forth in France in the 1820s. In this book, he set forth what that drama should be, clarifying his thesis by referring to Shakespeare, Byron and Sir Walter Scott (negatively) of England, and turning away from Corneille and Racine of Italy.

Now the book has been published for the first time in its entirety in English.

Reading Stendahl can bring us not only a new awareness of things past, but also brings us perspectives on our own century. Scholarly criticism of the literature of one age, in its efforts to interpret the life of that age, can help us to interpret our own literature and our own age.

Sticky Biography

THOMAS JEFFERSON: Apostle of Liberty, by Marguerite Eyer Wilbur, Liveright Publishing Corp., 404 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Margaret Eyer Wilbur, a Pasadenan (and sometimes Santa Barbaran), has written in her "Thomas Jefferson" a long, fictionized biography of one of our nation's first and greatest apostles of liberty.

Mrs. Wilbur may have done yeoman research into the life of her subject. Unfortunately, the facts are so concealed by a sticky mess of overwriting as to be scarcely recognizable.

Another Book For Rail Fans

INTERMOUNTAIN RAILROADS by Merrill D. Beal, Caxton Printers, 252 pages, $5. Reviewed by Dick Steinheimer.

The world still knows of the drama of Promontory, Utah, when in 1869 trains from east and west met to celebrate driving of the gold spike and completion of the country's first transcontinental.

Those hammer blows that echoed around the world by telegraph not only made history, but they almost ended its recording for the thousands of miles of railroads yet to come.

Only like scenes through a tarnished mirror come the tales of the roughneck camps of Saltese and Mullan made mean and boisterous by the advancing railhead of the Northern Pacific; and even the stories of barroom intrigues that won the ownership of Raton Pass for westward pushing Santa Fe.

Into such a vacuum comes Idaho State College professor Merrill D. Beal to record the early times and development of the railroads of Idaho and adjoining intermountain states.

With the dusty style of a professional historian, Doctor Beal documents the construction of the Utah Central Railroad from Salt Lake City to Ogden, a branch of the transcontinental line built by the insulted Mormons of Salt Lake City whose town had been bypassed in the westward drive.

The bulk of "Intermountain Railroads" deals with the construction later of the Utah and Northern Railroad north to Garrison, Mont., most of which, like the Utah Central, is now a main route of the Union Pacific.

The beginnings of the future great junction center of Pocatello are well described although not particularly colorfully.

Verdict: Good book for the intermountain reader as well as rail and history buffs.

THE STEREO SCENE

Jazz, Baroque For Christmas

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, FM & Cultural Guide

JINGLE BELL JAZZ — 12 different jazz artists—Columbia CS 8693 or CL 1893:

Just what I've been wanting for Christmas for a long time!

If you're hip, friend, you are getting mighty tired about this time o' year of Christmas carols ground out by every square group from Lawrence Welk to the Hollywood Bowl. This new album is the perfect holiday companion for the jazz fan.

Among the highlights are Duke Ellington's swinging "Jingle Bells," Carmen McRae's warm-hearted "Christmas Song," Paul Horn's terrific arrangement of "We Three King of Orient Are," and the Lambert, Hendricks and Ross Trio's hilarious Walt Kelley lyric, "Deck Us All with Boston Charlie."

THE GOLDEN AGE OF HARPSICORD MUSIC — Rafael Puyana, harpsicord — Mercury Stereo SR 90304:

The harpsichord seems to have a major role in the "Christmasy sound" of much Baroque music in which it appears.

This album should make a good holiday background then, or the perfect gift for the connoisseur of this particular instrument's delicate sound.

Due to Mercury's recording techniques and almost overbearing high fidelity, the effect is far from delicate. However, by turning down the volume one can achieve a sound more appropriate to hearing the keyboard instrument in person.

Works by a dozen composers plus that world-famous man, Anonymous, are included in Puyana's recital. The program is well-assembled for variety and interest.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Story Of First Christmas Gives Day's True Meaning

TELL ME ABOUT CHRISTMAS by Mary Alice Jones, Rand McNally, $2.50. Reviewed by Claudia Royal.

Mary Alice Jones, lover of little children, takes the story of the first Christmas, and gives it the true meaning of this memorable day.

Using happy family activities, she shows the spiritual significance of the occasion. In the child's own language she goes back through the Bible and shows why and how Christmas came to be.

Beginning with bright, beautiful end-paper and continuing through the book, Marjorie Cooper illustrates the story. Many pictures are full-page and in color. The community Christmas tree scene, pictures of the family at fireside, children's church choir and others add wealth and warmth to the book.

A good book for family reading-aloud during the Christmas season.

WITH BELLS ON by Katherine Milhous, Scribner's, $3.25. Reviewed by Claudia Royal.

This charming story tells of Christmas among the Pennsylvania Dutch people many years ago.

"I'll be home for Christmas with bells on," said Jonathan, as he drove away with Uncle Ned in a Conestoga wagon.

Younger brother Chrissley and sister Becky promised to make the "putz" or manger scene. This is the story of how they did it, and of how Jonathan reached home just in time for Christmas—with bells on.

Woven into this colorful story are customs of the day and people.

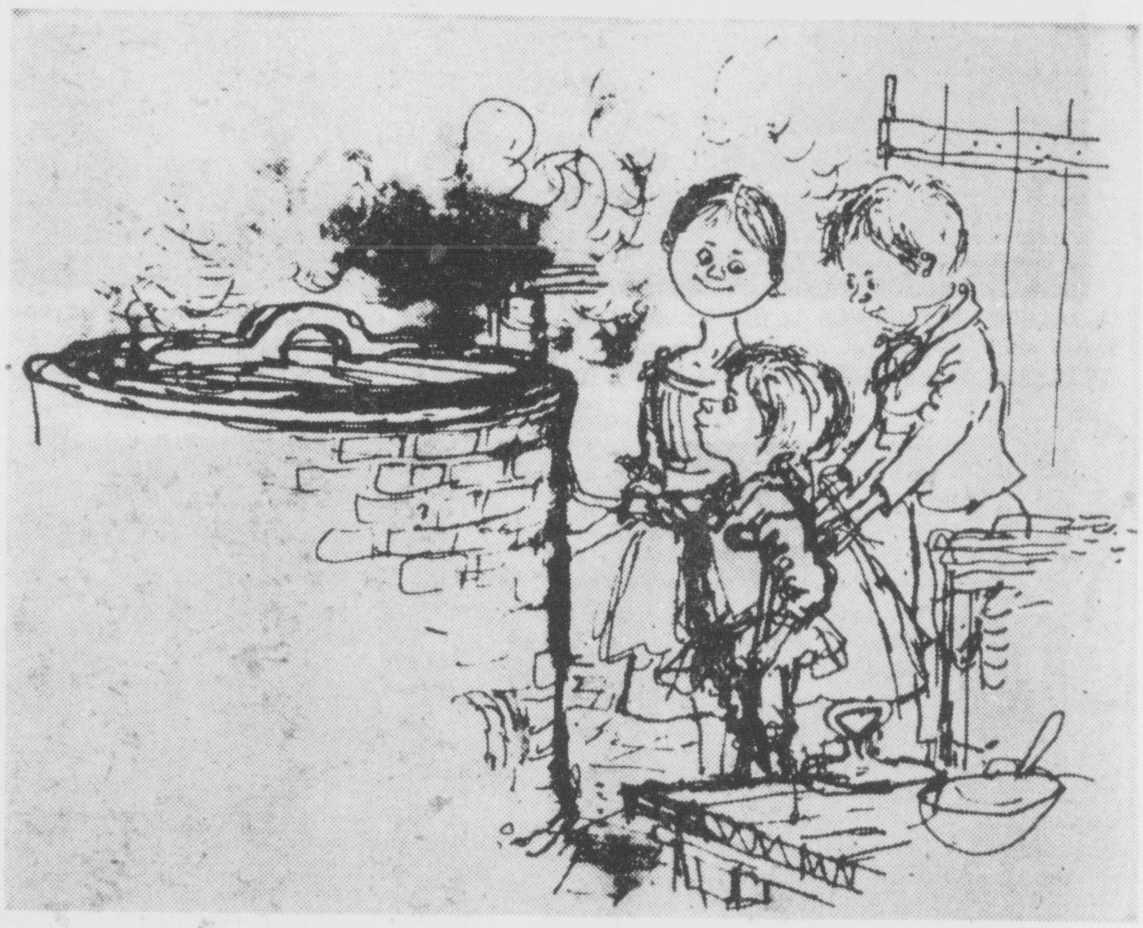
SCROOGE TREMBLES before the Ghost of Chrisimas Present. The drawing is from Ronald Searle's illustrated edition of the Charles Dickens classic, "A Christmas Carol."



THE CRATCHIT CHILDREN, including the immortal Tiny Tim, eagerly await Christmas dinner, listening to "the pudding singing in the copper." The Searle's version of the Dickens Christmas story was published by World Publishing Co. It's a story that never grows old at Christmas time.

Adventure Series For The Juniors

THE RIDDLE OF THE HAUNTED RIVER by Lawrence Earl, Little, Brown and Co., 160 pages, $1.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Juniors, too, need "escapist" reading. Little, Brown and Co. has just published a new series, called the "Secret Circle" books, which seem to fill that need especially well.

In common, the books all have a Canadian outdoors setting. They also feature adventure and mystery, a combination which youngsters have been "gobbling up" for generations.

The first of the six books in the series to reach us is Lawrence Earl's "The Riddle of the Haunted River." It is a lively yarn about teen-agers who brave both the perils of the river and some evil men during a canoe trip on the Miramichi.

Along with the exciting adventures, Earl has sandwiched in a considerable amount of lore on fishing and outdoor living in general. The violence is restrained.

It is the kind of book we reveled in during our own youth. And we doubt if the reading tastes of youngsters have changed measureably in this regards.

Other titles in the series — "The Legend of Devil's Lode," "The Mystery of Monster Lake," etc. — indicate that those books, too, are cut from the same general pattern.

The publisher says the books are intended for boys and girls 10 to 14. If "The Riddle of the Haunted River" is typical, we feel they will be most successful with boys—about 12 or 13. The very reasonable $1.95 price tag which Little, Brown and Co. has placed on these books is worth special notice.

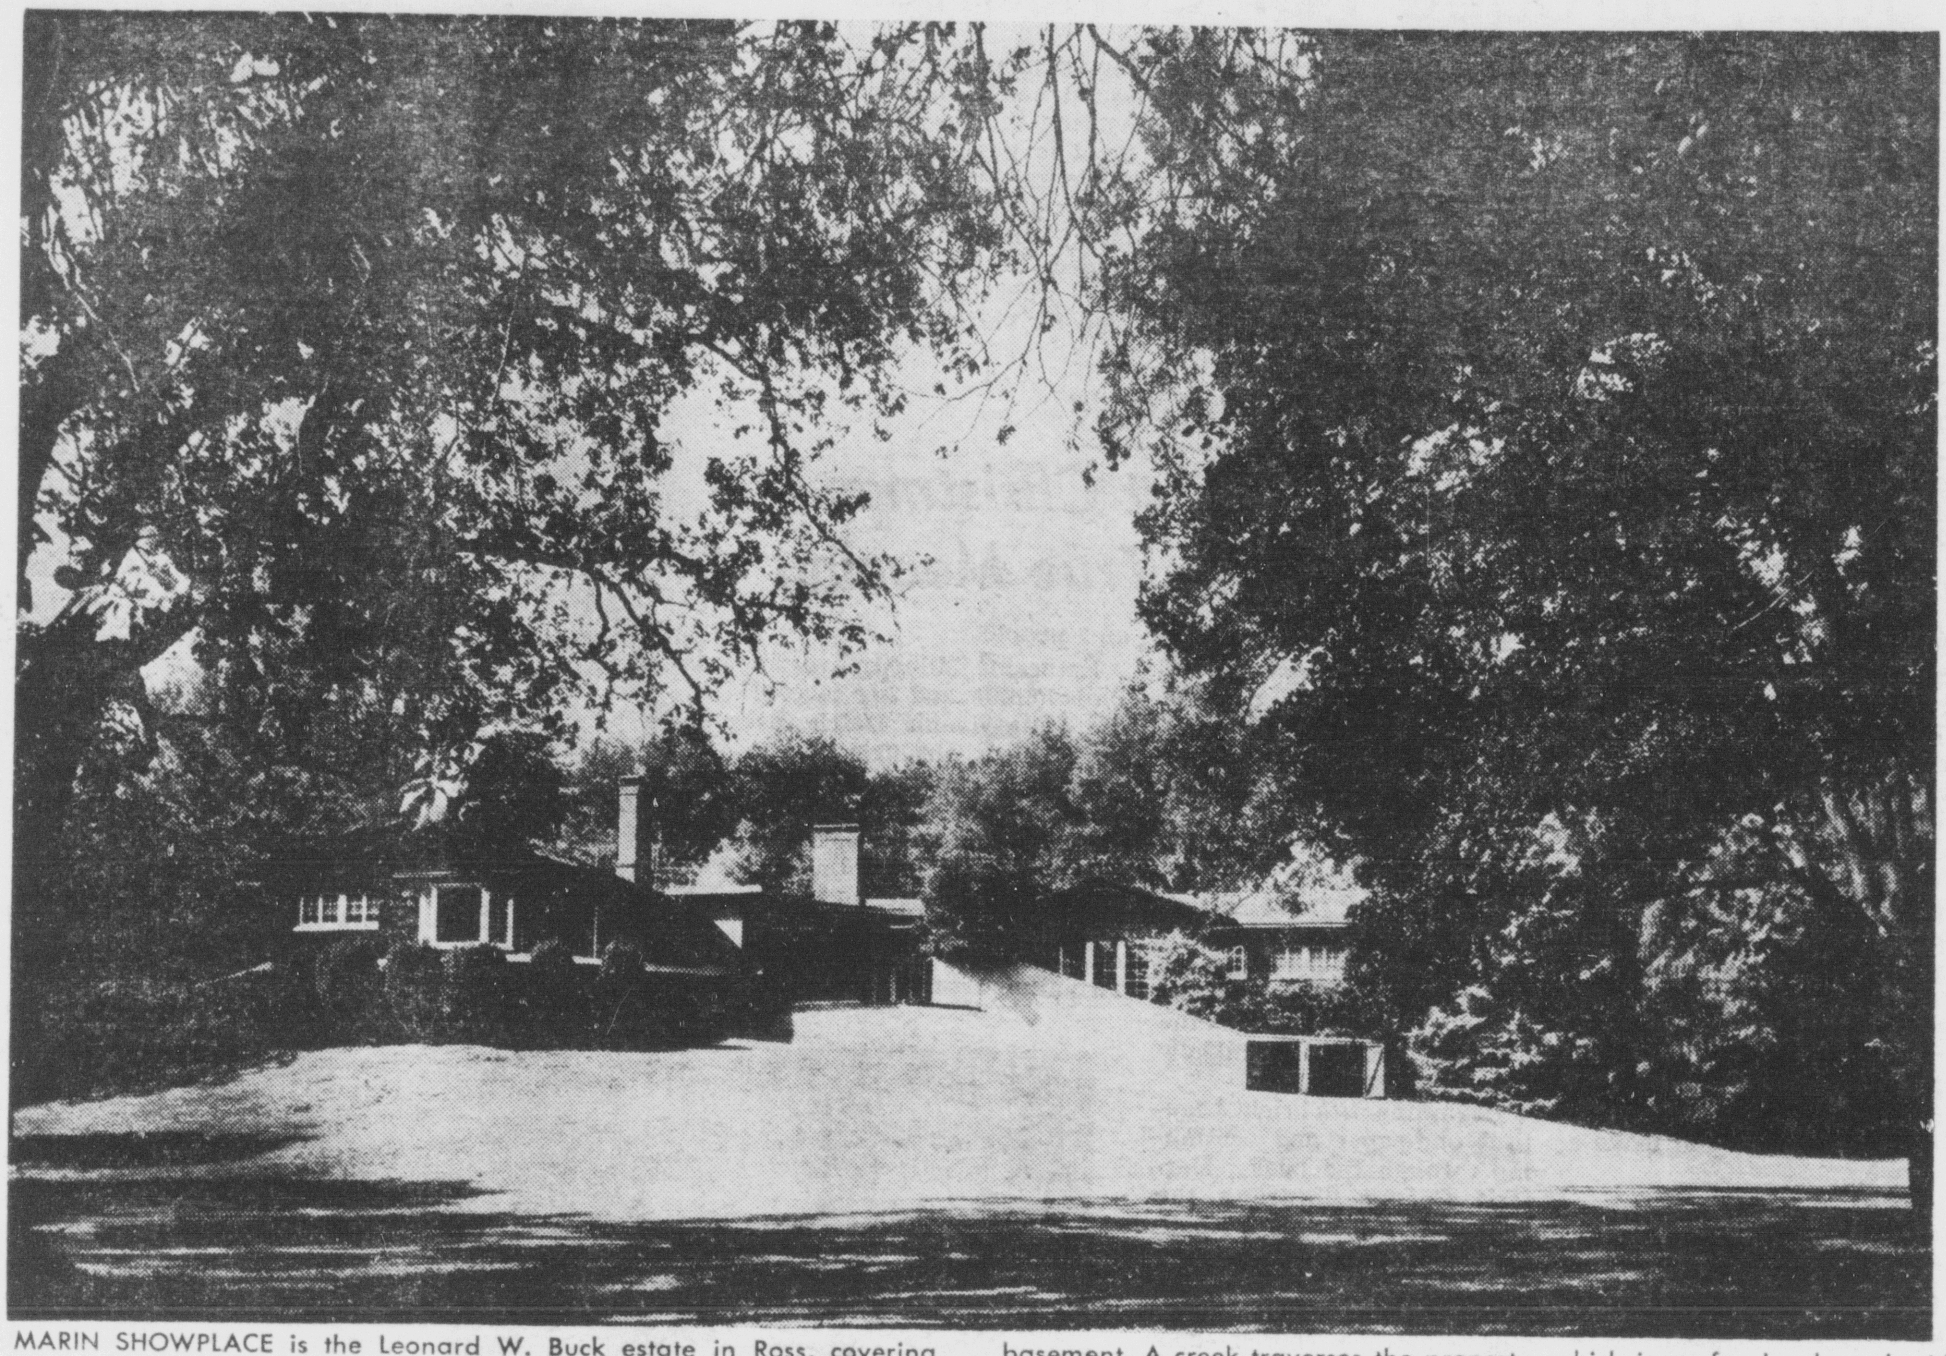
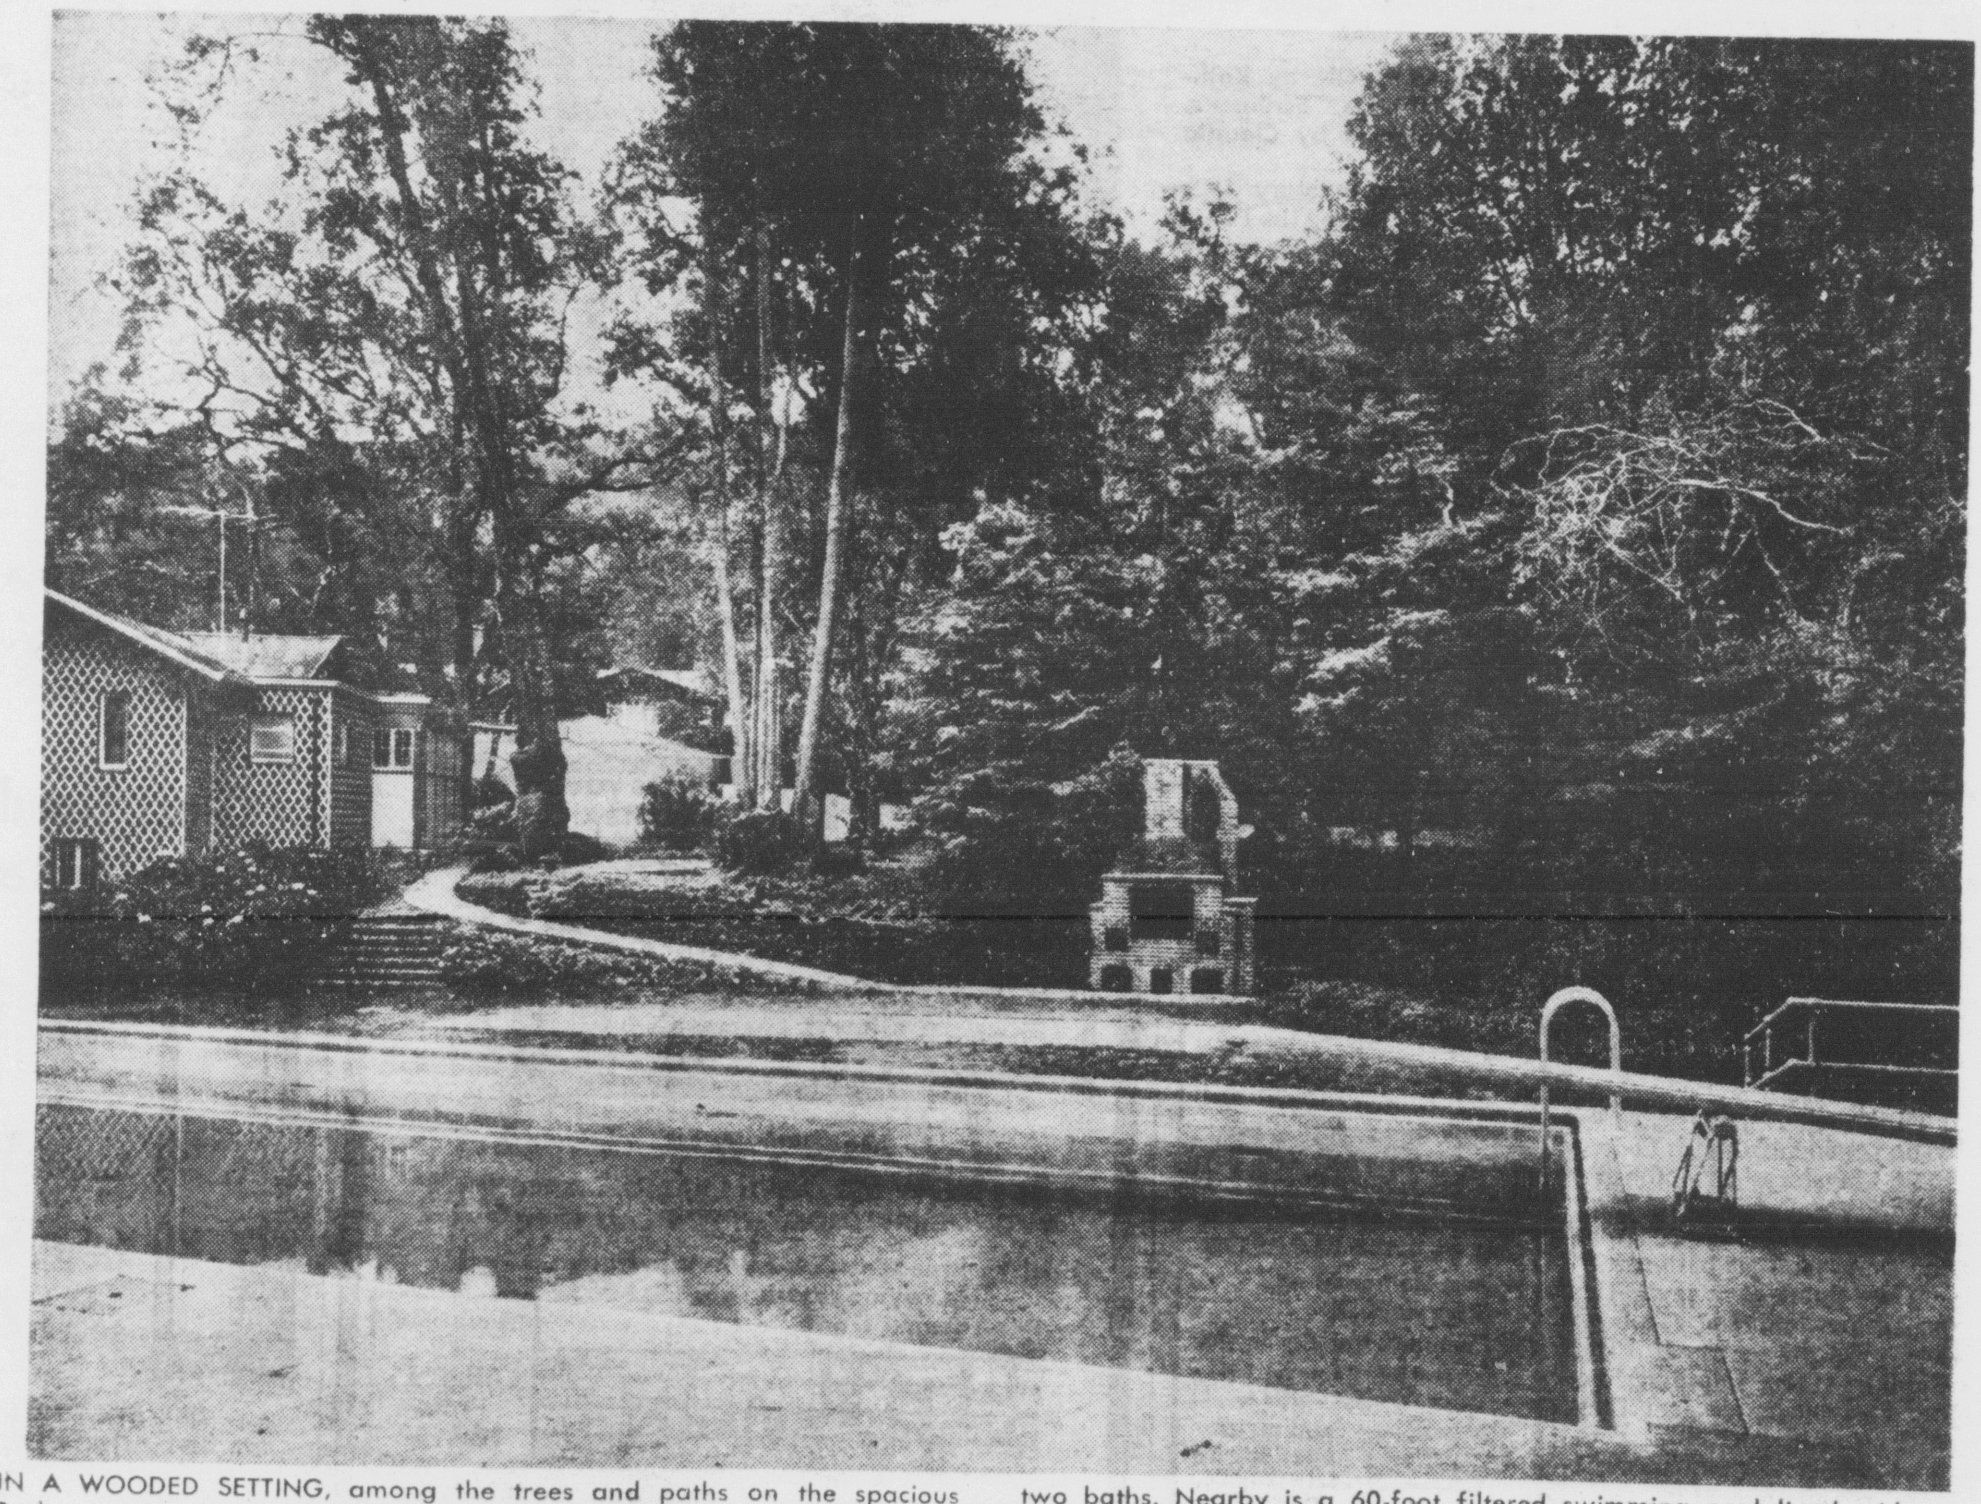
The Buck Mansion—Marin Showplace



A MARIN SHOWPLACE is the Leonard W. Buck estate in Ross, covering more than five acres of park-like grounds. The main residence, built in 1938, has seven rooms with as many more in the large, above-ground basement. A creek traverses the property, which is profusely planted with flowering shrubbery and magnificent shade trees. Water for irrigation is obtained from the estate's own well. (Photos by Stone and Steccati)



IN A WOODED SETTING, among the trees and paths on the spacious Buck property, is a two-bedroom guest cottage with full kitchen and two baths. Nearby is a 60-foot filtered swimming pool lined with porcelain tile. An elaborate brick barbecue, dressing rooms with two showers for bathers, and a bar complete the improvements in this area.

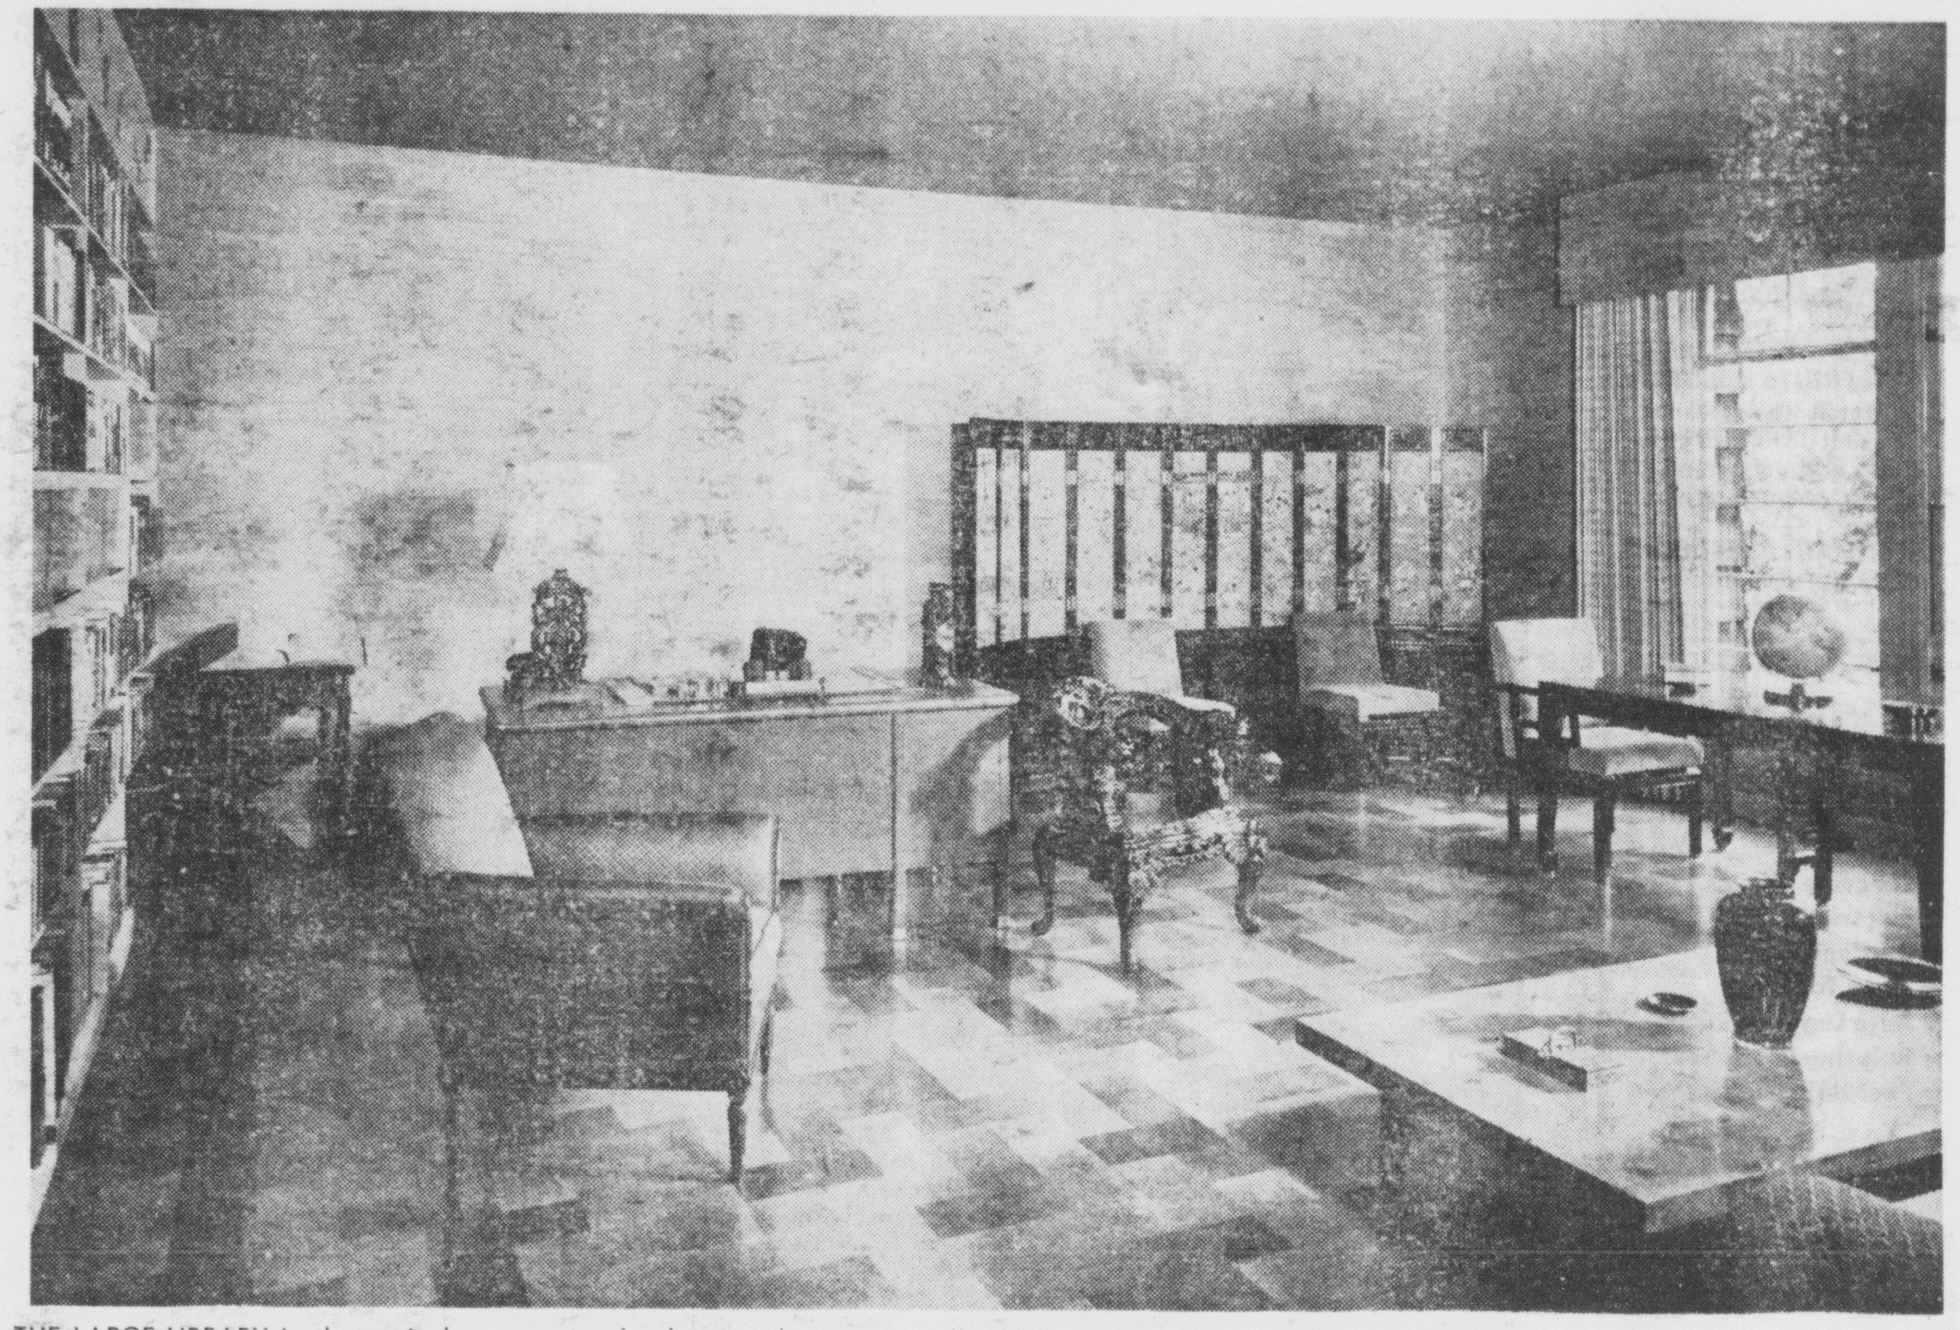
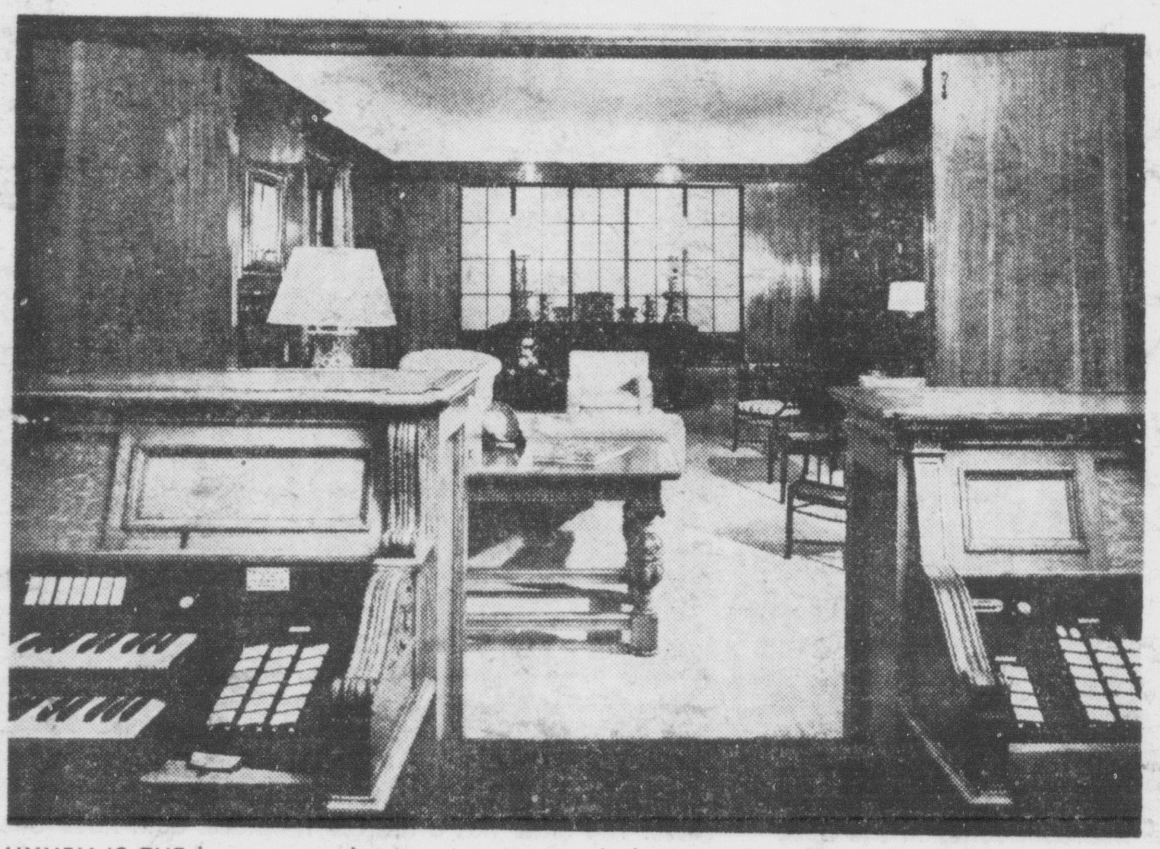
The Look Of Luxury In Ross Mansion



THE LARGE LIBRARY in the main house on the Leonard W. Buck estate home in Ross boasts cork floors, walls finished in grass cloth, view windows and floor-to-ceiling bookcases along one wall. It all goes to make this area in the huge Buck mansion a delightful example of restful suburban living at its very best.



LUXURY IS THE keynote to the interior appointments of the Buck mansion. A beautiful pipe organ with two consoles has its pipes cleverly concealed behind a shoji screen wall in the living room. Indirect lighting in the ceiling, matched wall panels of handsome Wisconsin birch and a concealed bar are other living room features. (See page M-18 for additional photos of the Buck estate.)

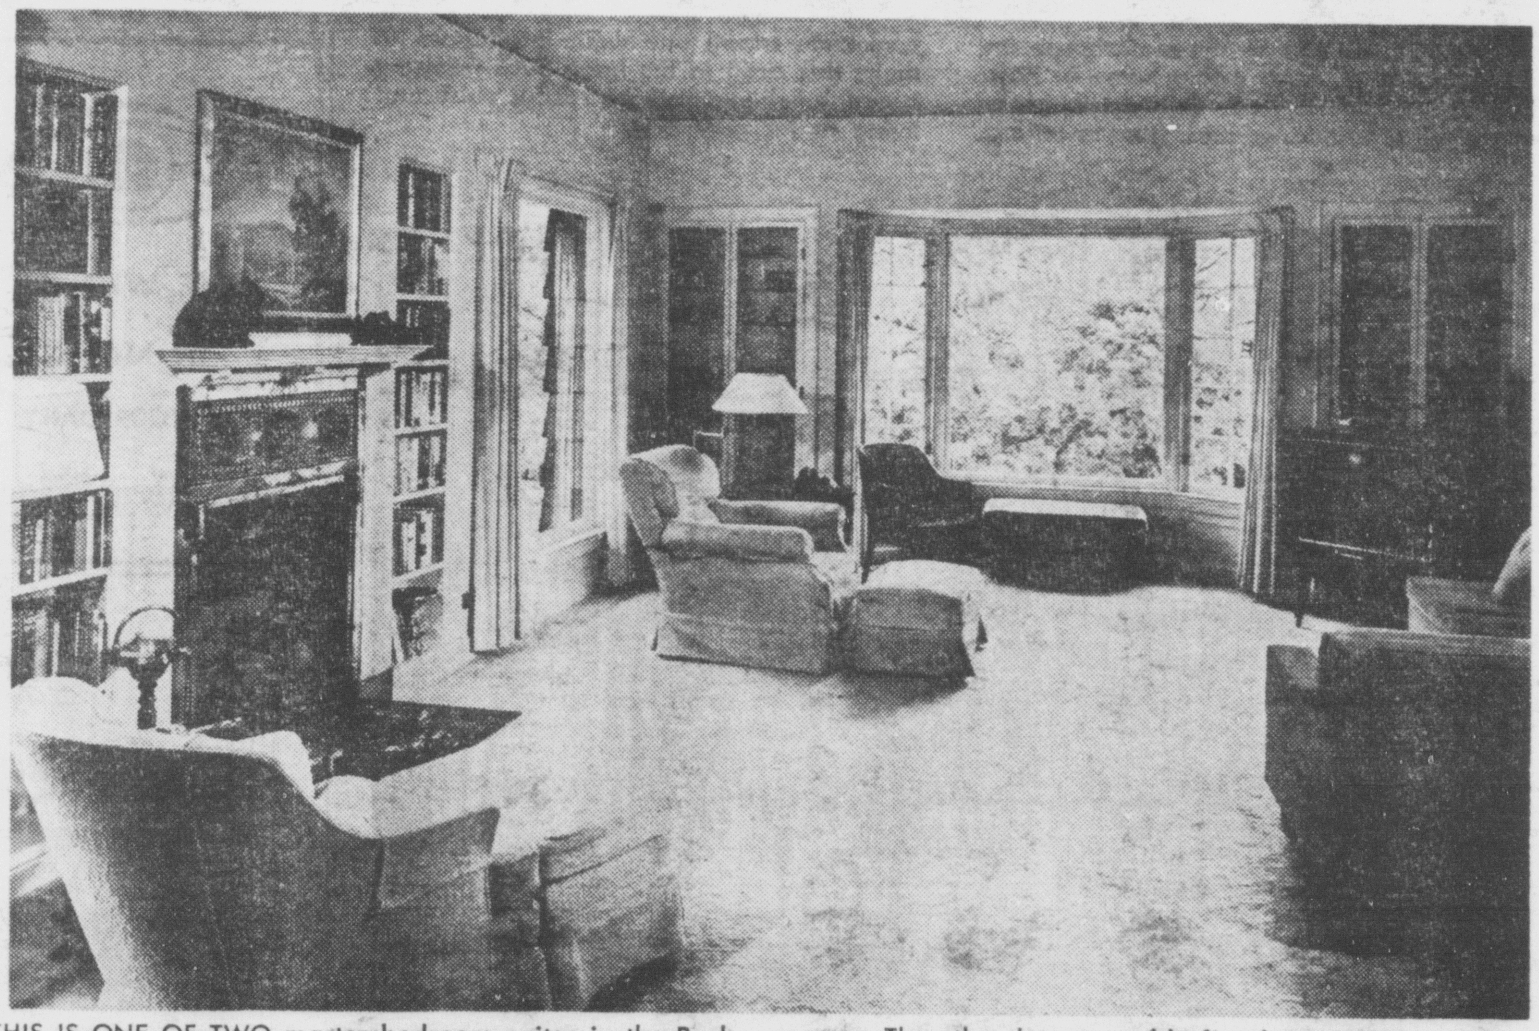
Marin Living

STILL MORE EXTRA accommodations are to be found on the Leonard W. Buck estate in Ross in this detached, six-car garage constructed of steel-reinforced concrete with a brick facing. Above it is an upstairs apartment with living room, bedroom, kitchen, bath and studio. Surfaced driveways wander from the parking area throughout the grounds.



THIS IS ONE OF TWO master bedroom suites in the Buck home. It has a fireplace with brass and pewter appointments and an ornamental stone hearth flanked by bookcases. The other has a marble fireplace. Both have deep-pile wall-to-wall carpeting, banks of closets, connecting dressing rooms and porches.

"Realty Ramblings"

All too often people are sold houses they should never have purchased. Because, even though they seem to like the house, sometimes there is lacking from it the SPIRIT of the house for the type of living the new owners will be trying to enjoy five years hence.

Sometimes a prospective buyer lays too much stress on strong timbers, fireproof roofs, and copper piping, forgetting that often death comes to a building, not because of a weak structure, but, for want of SPIRIT.

William A. Lewis

A home is more than a furnace, copper piping and electrical outlets. There is something more that you, and only you, can put into a house to give it SPIRIT. I like to call that something "Charm." You cannot put that charm into all houses that merely "suit" you. It must be your kind of house, or, the charm you try so hard to put into it just won't take. So when you are looking for a house, make no compromise and do nothing unless you fall "head over heels" in love with it.

Don't worry about whether or not your friends will like it; or, whether it has enough artistic touch. Rather, make sure that you feel inside yourself that it is your kind of house and that you will make of it a "home."

Having assured yourself of this, then look to the details of construction; for, without having first gained the SPIRIT, there is no rhyme nor reason to good construction.

ONE OF OUR MOST wonderful native plants — indeed the odds-on favorite of many gardeners — is the colorful Toyon. With its handsome green foliage and bumper crop of bright red berries in fall and winter, the added bonus of clusters of white flowers in spring seems almost too much of a good thing. The photograph seen here shows a close-up of the berry. It is important for gardeners to remember that being a native and liking everyday conditions in the garden, the Toyon will take off and grow sometimes to heights of 25 feet or so as a multiple-trunked tree. It can also be trained as a large bushy shrub. Just to be safe—give it plenty of room. The inset shows you how your Toyon will look in a gallon can as seen at you nurseryman's headquarters. (California Assn. of Nurserymen photo)

GARDENERS CHECKLIST

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Living Christmas trees are still available for indoor and outdoor use.
- Most bareroot materials—roses, fruit trees and shade trees—have arrived in nurseries. The sooner you plant it, the better.
- Lift dahlia clumps and store them in a dry place until next spring. Most gardeners wait until spring to divide the clumps.
- Plant spring blooming bulbs. Daffodils, tulips, hyacinths, grape hyacinths and others should go into the ground without further delay.
- Wait until January or early February to prune established roses and until February to prune fuchsias.

THE CHRISTMAS BERRY

A Practical, Colorful Native

Of all the native plants which grace our state, none has more practical value than the colorful Christmas berry.

Here is a shrub or small tree which fits readily into the garden setting. It has handsome green foliage, white spring bloom and bright red berries in late fall. The latter are ideal for decking the halls during our holiday season.

There are many names by which you might find the California Christmas berry. Botanists call it Photinia, while old friends know it as Toyon or California holly. By any name, however, it is still the same fine shrub which nurserymen rank with the Ceanothus as one of our two most useful natives.

PHOTINIA, the botanical name, is derived from the Greek photeinos, which means "shining," and that is one of the first things you notice about this fine shrub. At any season it is an evergreen mass of glossy green, saw-toothed leaves, some four inches long. These leaves make a rich background in the garden. They are spotted occasionally with bronzy tones and often with bright red leaves, which turn that way just before they drop off the shrub.

In spring, the Christmas berry is aglow with flowers. These are pink in the bud, white when they open and are borne in clusters which later become berries. In full bloom, the shrub is often completely covered with white flowers. The flowers are not spectacular, but in the manner of a Pyracantha, their numbers make a fine show. They are mighty nice to have around.

In fall come the berries, bushels of them, which countless berry seekers tramp over the countryside to cut for decoration. You wonder sometimes why people go to such trouble, when planting one shrub would take care of their berry needs with plenty to spare.

Plant Christmas berry in any normal soil and don't make it struggle for a start in life.
